AWAY THEY GO

These three photos show the Apollo and Soyuz spaceships parting for the final time Saturday. The spacemen ended two days of high adventure which included visits to each other's ships, exchange of food and scientific experiments.

Space parting--mission over

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — American and Soviet voyagers separated their space cruisers Saturday and drifted apart — ending a two-day orbital union of friendship and cooperation.

After a final partnership effort for science, the Apollo gave a short rocket burst and began a final, slow, separating drift.

"This was a very good job," said one of the cosmonauts as the American craft moved away.

"I see your spacecraft," said Stafford. "It is beautiful ... very, very silver."

Astronaut Vance Brand watched as the Soyuz faded and told mission control: "He's got a beacon flashing and you can see the lights very well. He's gone ahead of us and with the dark Earth in the background it's just as if an airliner is going underneath us."

The space linkup lasted for 47 hours and 17 minutes of high-flying friendship. The final undocking came at 11:26 a.m. EPT and the separation rocket burst at 2:42 p.m. EDT.

Stafford, Brand and Donald K. Slayton lingered near the Soyuz for a time after the last undocking, delicately guiding their Apollo craft through maneuvers for a series of experiments.

Leonov and Valeri Kubasov watched as the larger American craft fired beams of light at the Soviet spaceship in a study of the rarified atmosphere in space.

The spaceships will gradually move further apart during the day Sunday. Then, the Soviets will fire retrorockets to settle their craft into the embrace of earth's atmosphere. The Soyuz will parachute to a flat south central Russian plain early Monday morning.

Apollo will continue its flight until Thursday.

Like two friends reluctant to part, the spaceships separated once and then came together again in a test of the the docking system jointly designed by the two countries.

Both undocking exercises were televised to earth from the Apollo craft.

The redocking was to retest the tulip-shaped locking collar jointly designed by the two countries. This time, the Soyuz docking device was the "active" half of the system. It was cocked and ready to grasp and seal itself to the Apollo's retracted collar.

The docking test, reuniting the craft after 32 minutes apart, was successful.

Apollo and Soyuz were together again for about three hours and Stafford gave the Soviets what he called "a little present of music."

Then he played a recording of the song "Hello Darlin" sung in Russian by Conway Twitty.

Apollo mission control told Stafford "that sounded like it was from far western Oklahoma, around Kiev."

Then it was time for the final parting.

To attend 35-nation Helsinki meet

Ford due at summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford will go to Helsinki, Finland, July 30-Aug. 1 to take part in the 35-nation summit meeting of the European Security Conference, it was announced Saturday.

The President is expected to leave Washington by next Saturday on the Helsinki trip which is understood to be the forerunner to additional stops in Bonn, Warsaw, Bucharest and Belgrade. Mrs. Ford is expected to accompany the President on the 10-day trip.

The Helsinki trip was announced after the European Security Conference delegates meeting in Genva finally reach an agreement Friday on the charter that the leaders of the member nations will adopt at their Helsinki meeting.

The charter has been under negotiation for more than two years.

The United States, the Soviet Union and 33 other nations formally agreed Saturday to hold an East-West super summit July 30 in Helsinki that has been sought by Russian to confirm its post-World War II influence over Eastern Europe.

Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev and leaders of other nations plan to attend the Helsinki summit which is likely to last three days.

The White House said in a statement issued by Press Secretary Ron Nessen that the President's presence in Helsinki "reflects our view that the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe final document, which includes declarations of political resolve and intent on a broad range of East-West issues, represents a positive step in our continuing efforts to build a more stable and productive East-West relationship."

The White House has not yet issued an itinerary for Ford's trip, which will be his second visit to Europe. In late May and early June, he went to Brussels for a meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, conferred in Salzburg, Austria, with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and went on to visit Spain and Italy.

An advance team is already in Europe making plans for the presidential trip, which has been tentative for some weeks while the Security Conference delegates were overcoming last-minute conflicts in the charter negotiations.

The meeting will bring to a formal close the long negotiations and permit leaders to sign the final document that has come out of it covering a wide range of issues including troop maneuvers.

Ford plans to be back in Washington in time for a previously scheduled meeting there with Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Miki on Aug. 56.

Ontario man shot dead; brother-in-law booked

Dead of a shot to the head is Cesar Carranza, 1755 E. Princeton Ave., Ontario.

Police responded to a telephone call from Mrs. Carranza that her husband had been shot late Friday night.

Officers discovered Mackley in a squatting position immediately inside a master bedroom. He was holding Carranza in his arms and pressing a cloth to a wound in the upper left side of the head in an attempt to stop bleeding.

Carranza was taken by ambulance to San Antonio Community Hospital at Upland where he was pronounced dead on arrival at 12:10 a.m. Saturday.

Mackley told officers that he and his brother-in-law had been drinking, and that upon reaching the house, Carranza went to the bedroom, while Mackley went to the bathroom.

Mackley said that while he was in the bathroom he heard a loud bang and rushed out to see Carranza fall back onto a bed.

A short time later Mackley changed his story, police said, and booked him on the murder charge.

Officers said they explained to Mackley that if Carranza had been right-handed it would have been almost physically impossible to hold a gun up and shoot oneself in the head. Police did not indicate whether Carranza was right-handed or left-handed.

Officers asked Mackley if Carranza had handed him the gun, and it had gone off, to which Mackley said, "No, he didn't."

Officers said the gun had one round in the chamber, was cocked, and the safety was off.

Mackley said his brother-in-law was not despondent.

Mrs. Carranza told police that her husband appeared to be the happiest person in the world.

She explained that he had wanted a small gun around the house for protection because they had just moved into the house.

Massive bookie L.A. raids

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Federal agents raided 20 bookmaking establishments in the Los Angeles area Saturday, an operation officials said was the first of its kind under a new federal wagering law.

About 120 agents from the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Firearms and Tobacco were involved in the raids in South Los Angeles and Compton.

No arrests were made, but officials said evidence collected in the raids would be turned over to a federal grand jury for investigation and possible indictments.

Under the new law, the bureau has the responsibility for enforcing payment of a $500 tax stamp and 2 per cent excise tax on all bookmaking operations. The raids Saturday were the first since the law took effect last Jan. 1.

Treasury officials said more than $250,000 a day was being wagered in the alleged bookmaking establishments, where the stamp fees and excise taxes assertedly were not being paid.

The establishments included barber shops, pizza parlors and private residences, authorities said.

Seek to avenge friend

6 women armed with knives attack rapist

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Six young women, apparently seeking to avenge a friend's rape, armed themselves with knives and attacked a Daytona Beach man, police said Saturday.

"They were revenging the rape, that's what they were doing," Det. Don Walters said.

John Dotson, 20, was reported in satisfactory condition at a local hospital with multiple stab wounds.

Police said a man had gotten into the car of a young Daytona Beach woman early Friday morning, held a razor to her neck and raped her. In the struggle, the woman was cut with the razor and required 16 to 22 stitches, police said.

Police said the woman later swore out a warrant for Dotson's arrest. But before officers could arrest him, he was jumped by six females Friday afternoon in the front yard of his home, police said.

"I don't imagine it would be too hard to find out who the women are," Walters said. He said the case would be turned over to the state attorney's office.

Bullet fells Pomona man in front of home

A 21-year-old Pomona man was in serious condition Saturday after being shot in the chest outside his home, police said.

Officers at first theorized the shooting of Gino E. Guevara of 2077 Primrose Way, was gang-related. They later discounted the possibility, and were continuing the investigation.

Guevara was shot by a .22 caliber weapon as he talked with a friend outside his residence Friday afternoon. The friend told police the victim was walking toward him, when he heard a "pop", and Guevara fell to the ground.

The witness said he heard squealing tires and loud pipes of a car, possibly leaving the area.

Guevara was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital, and admitted to the intensive care unit. Surgery was performed to remove the bullet, officers indicated.

Beauty title to Miss Finland

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Miss Finland, Anne Pohtamo, was named Miss Universe 1975 over representatives from 70 other countries in the 24th annual pageant broadcast throughout the world from San Salvador Saturday night.

Runners up were Miss Haiti, Gerthie David; Miss U.S.A., Summer Bartholomew of Merced, Calif; Miss Sweden, Catharina Sjodahl and Miss Philippines, Rosemarie Singson Brosas.

Miss Pohtamo, a 19-year-old model from Helsinki, has measurements of 34-24-33. She is 5 feet 9, weighs 116 pounds and has long blonde hair and green eyes.

She speaks fluent English and Swedish, lists her hobbies as music, volleyball, sewing and reading, and her life ambition is to be an economist.

Asked earlier in the week who she thought was the greatest person in the world today, she named Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Miss Brazil, Ingrid Budag; Miss Colombia, Martha Echeverry; Miss El Salvador, Carmen Figueroa; Miss England, Vicki Harris; Miss Ireland, Julie Ann Farnham; Miss Israel, Orit Cooper, and Miss Japan, Sachiko Nakayama.

Earlier, the 71 beauty queens had elected Miss Trinidad-Tabago, Christine Jackson, as Miss Unity.

The contest went on without incident after government opponents who were barred from demonstrating against the pageant exploded a bomb at the door of the national tourist office.

Woman killed in Via Verde crash

A 22-year-old Covina woman was killed Saturday night when the car in which she was riding left Covina Hills Road in San Dimas, plunged down an embankment and smashed into a tree.

Ruby Odelia Hess died instantly, highway patrolmen said, after the car, driven by Charles Nahom, 20, of Arcadia, plunged 25 feet and wrapped around the tree.

Patrolmen said Nahom was traveling westbound on Covina Hills Road, west of Via Verde Avenue, about 8 p.m. The car went out of control on a curve. Nahom suffered minor injuries and was taken to San Dimas Community Hospital.

Massage parlor robbed

Two armed men wearing surgical tape on their faces robbed a Pomona massage parlor of $290 in cash late Friday night, and also took money from three employes' wallets.

Officers said the men, carrying a gun and a knife, tied the victims' hands and rifled a cash box at the Swedish Salon, 1293 N. Garey Ave., at 10 p.m.

The suspects proceeded to take about $70 from the wallets of two masseuses and another employe. One gunman was wearing a red watch cap, the other a fatigue shirt and bell bottoms.

Chinese law in 300 B.C. forbade speaking to the Emperor without a clove in one's mouth.

Motorist injured

A 21-year-old Chino man was injured Saturday when his car spun out of control on San Jose Avenue in Claremont, and smashed into a telephone pole.

Claremont officer Robert Hamilton said the driver, Larry Bowman, told him that he "blacked out" prior to the accident, west of Indian Hill Boulevard, about 4 p.m. The victim was transported to Park Avenue Hospital, Pomona.

Mail strike may be averted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postal union leaders said Saturday they would be willing to extend the contract to avoid a mail strike if satisfactory progress was made in negotiations before the midnight Sunday deadline.

Both sides were eager to avoid a walkout and the union leaders urged postal workers to report to work as scheduled Monday unless they received different instructions from the leadership.

"If certain things can be accomplished by Sunday, I think the unions will agree to a short extension of the contract," said President Francis Filbey, of the 250,000-member American Postal Workers Union, the largest of four involved in the talks.

And James Lapenta, chief negotiator for the mail handlers division of the Labor International Union, also said an extension would "be sensible for a day or two" if an agreement seemed near.

"Nobody wants to strike," he added.

New Disney project near Reno explained

Similar to stymied, controversial Mineral King Sierras development

TRUCKEE, Calif. (AP)— Walt Disney Productions, stymied in its dream of a year round resort at Mineral King, has turned its attention to a small, man made lake near the California-Nevada border.

Independence Lake, with 9,143 foot Mt. Lola rising from its shores, will be the site of the firm's latest family "destination" resort project, if local authorities approve.

Plans for the facility 192 miles east of San Francisco and 50 miles west of Reno were outlined at an informational meeting for county supervisors and planners here last week.

Disney will build the resort in a 10,000 acre area, of which less than 10 per cent will be developed. The rest will remain in its natural state.

Included will be a pedestrian-oriented village, a 275-room lodge, underground parking, condominiums, shops, an electric-cog railway, a mountain top restaurant and a wide variety of outdoor recreation activities, including skiing, hiking, camping and fishing.

The project is similar to that planned at Mineral King, a narrow, two-mile long valley located at the 7,800 foot level of Sequoia National Forest in Central California and surrounded on three sides by Sequoia-Kings Canyon National Park.

The controversial Mineral King development would have included an "American alpine village," several restaurants, shops, convention facilities and outdoor sports activities.

Mineral King was geared to 3,300 overnight guests and up to 8,000 skiers a day. Independence Lake will handle nearly 3,000 overnight visitors and 5,000 skiers each weekend day.

The Mineral King project was halted when it drew unalterable opposition from environmentalists, led by the powerful Sierra Club, which filed a suit in 1969.

When the court battle snarled Disney's plans, it put Mineral King on the back burner and started looking about for another site for the year-round, recreation oriented resort it so badly wanted to build.

"We haven't done any real work on Mineral King in five years or more," a Disney spokesman said. "It is very much in dead water."

While the project could be revived, it will have to wait until the Independence Lake resort is finished, probably around Thanksgiving, 1978.

"We do not see Independence Lake as a subsitute for Mineral King" Disney officials said, pointing out the attractions are aimed at different users.

Mineral King was conceived as a destination resort for Southern Californians, the firm said, while Indpendence will attract visitors from Northern California and the Northwest.

About two years ago, the Sierra Pacific Power Co. of Reno approached Disney Productions with a suggestion that one of its water storage lakes might offer a suitable location.

Last July, after studying several sites, Disney entered into a joint venture agreement with Sierra Pacific and with the Southern Pacific Land Co., principal property owners in the lake area.

Disney is the general and operating partner, while Southern Pacific, which owns 7,300 acres, and Sierra Pacific, owning 2,200 acres, are limited partners.

The key difference between Mineral King and Independence Lake is that while Mineral King would have required use of mostly public lands, almost all of the property to be used north of here is privately held.

There would be some skiing on forest service property and some ski lift towers might be built on public lands, Disney officials have said.

Disney officials hope to avoid some of the angry public opposition it met at Mineral King by working closely with Sierra and Nevada County public officials. The resort will be partially in both counties.

Planning, barely a year old, is still in its initial stages and the resort may not reach the scope outlined last week. The key will be land use capabilities as determined in studies now underway.

Independence Lake is a relatively small body of water, roughly two and a half miles long and a half mile wide, with a surface elevation of 6,949 feet. Sierra Pacific, which purchased the land around the lake in 1937, built a dam here in 1939.

The lake has been a resort retreat since the 1880s, when winter ice was a commercial product.

The lake reportedly was named by colorful adventuress Lola Montez, who legend says visited the area on July 4, 1853. The mountain overlooking the lake is named after her.

Last week's meeting was to announce that year-long preliminary environmental and land use studies have determined the area can support a major resort complex.

The next step will be more detailed design and cost studies by Disney employes and complete studies of ecology, recreation and social-economic aspects.

A detailed environmental impact report—the work of more than 25 individuals and firms— is expected to be completed by late this year.

Disney Productions also must obtain clearance from local planning authorities and the boards of supervisors in the two counties, who were noncommittal at last week's session.

Specific figures on money investment are not available, officials say, because of the early stages of the development. The Mineral King project was to have cost $35 million in the late 1960s.

Laced through the presentation here, which included a 19 minute slide show, were frequent references to the memory of Walt Disney himself.

"The Walt Disney philosophy will be the keystone of everything we do at Independence Lake," the show's narrator promised, noting Disney's lifelong interest in the outdoors.

Police wage fight before council

Pomona police officers will carry their wage fight to the Pomona City Council Monday night when the council meets for its regular 8 p.m. meeting.

Police reportedly promised Friday that they would be present Monday to speak to the council about stalled wage negotiations, in which police have asked for a 20 per cent increase and the city has offered 2.5 per cent.

Negotiators for the city and police met Thursday with a state mediator but were unable to break the month-long deadlock in the dispute, which has included a general slowdown and "sick in" by police.

Other agenda items for the meeting include a recommendation from the Vehicle Parking District Commission concerning current vacancies on the commission.

Juvenile law upheld

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state Supreme Court has upheld a law giving juvenile courts power to declare minors wards of the court and remove them from their homes.

The ruling Monday denied a challenge by Edgar M., a minor convicted of assault with a deadly weapon. A juvenile court referee ordered him to a state reform program in 1973 and he appealed for a rehearing.

The high court said the juvenile court did have authority to remove Edgar from his home because the pertinent state law was constitutional.

Energy czar

Zarb: even his enemies admire him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frank Zarb's eyes seem to burn with a smokeless blue flame, even at day's end, even at rest. The pilot light is still on.

And now it flares briefly brighter as President Ford's superenergetic energy chief measures his powers, personal and political, and his impatience with those who do not believe as he does in America's ability to sacrifice when it has to.

He recalls quietly the night some months ago when he was summoned to the Oval Office by the President who was then working on his first State of the Union message.

It was 9 p.m., and for six hours, over uncounted cups of coffee, they hammered out a tough federal energy policy. When Frank Gustav Zarb left the White House at 3 in the morning, he took with him the duty of selling that policy to a skeptical Congress, and an abiding faith in his new boss, "a guy who's really willing to dive in the trenches with you."

It is that singular regard between Zarb and his boss — plus Zarb's unrelenting, head-to-head approach — that has made him a man to be reckoned with from the White House to Capitol Hill; even to the point that he advocated a politically dangerous veto of Rep. Morris Udall's strip mining bill, which would have put the burden of repairing the land on the mining industry.

"He's obviously bright," Udall says in the wake of the veto. "He's obviously very good at bureaucratic in-fighting. It's just incredible to me the hold he's got on Ford ... There's something about Zarb that's got Ford mesmerized. I've just been unable to understand it.

"It has to be in terms of a Ford attitude or basic philosophy that was always there; no feel for environmental considerations, a readiness to accept industry arguments on each of these close questions."

The decision on the strip mining bill, Zarb says, "was probably the hardest decision I made in this job. Because I knew the roof would cave in. But here it was on my desk, two separate analyses giving me the same conclusion: There was no question but what, because of the vagaries of the bill and the way some aspects were written, we'd suffer a coal loss for the first two years.

"Now how in the world could I stand up and tell the American people that we should have that legislation right now? ... And how could I feel that I was fulfilling the mandate of my responsibility if I said 'let's take the political, easy way out' even if this had made our energy problem today more severe two years from now.

Zarb's reputation as a common sense, lay-it-on-the-line persuader is seldom denied, even by political opponents, some of whom say he is in bed with industry. But not everyone has the same view of this man who appears as Mr. Cool in the often manufactured hot-blooded public confrontations of the Washington scene.

"He has a certitude about him that is part of the strength, I guess," says Udall. "But it can also be a very great weakness. He reminds me of the old saying, 'often wrong but never in doubt.'"

William Anders, the Apollo 8 astronaut whom Zarb talked into becoming head of the Nuclear Control Council, was asked if Zarb would make a good astronaut.

"He'd make a pretty good one," Anders answered guardedly, "But he'd make a better fighter pilot. He's an aggressive guy who knows his equipment and uses it to the full. If he has a fault, it's that he works so hard."

And hard is the way Zarb works.

His days as head of the Federal Energy Administration often run to 16 hours; his weeks to six days or seven.

Zarb is a shirt-sleeve manager who prefers person-to-person confrontations, hates needless red tape and only tolerates his suit jacket, which comes off as soon as official situations permit. It more often adorns the chair next to him or the table behind.

"Zarb's one of the most effective people in this administration," says Alan Greenspan, head of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. "He's a useful combination of understanding analytical problems and knowing how to deal with the political environment.

"He has a capability of knowing what is causing other people problems."

At 40, Zarb has climbed the government ranks almost as dramatically as he did on Wall Street where he earned a reputation as an effective administrator. For five years he was chairman of the executive committee of the securities firm Hayden Stone & Co.

The Nixon administration called him to the Labor Department in 1971 to centralize internal operations. He left in 1972 to return to Wall Street, and later came back to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) where he trouble-shot problems in Indian affairs, agriculture and energy.

The reputation he won in dealing with a truckers' strike and a coal strike led to his appointment last December as federal energy administrator.

Brooklyn-born, Zarb came on his pragmatism early. He remembers being part of the Knot-Hole gang, watching the Dodgers play through cracks in the outfield fence when "the cops didn't give us tickets to Ebbetts Field to keep us off the street."

His father, Maltese by birth, emigrated to the United States via Turkey and Italy, and plied his trade as a refrigerator repairman. Frank Zarb wanted to be an aviation mechanic, but a teacher in high school pressed him to go to college.

He worked his way through Hofstra University on Long Island with odd jobs ranging from refrigeration repair to ad salesman for Newsday. He was president of his fraternity and president of the student body.

Zarb

Zarb only through an increased tendency to slur his sibilants. But the alertness never leaves him, and his penetrating blue eyes are alternately sad, intense, bored beneath his heavy brows.

"Needless red tape, I hate," he says, his feet up on his huge walnut desk, which dominates his elegant and cavernous office, once the lair of postmasters-general when that job denoted political power.

He has some simple rules for getting along and avoiding frustrations:

"In the first place I usually tell it like it is, no matter who it's to. If it's to a congressman or a senator I just let them know it like I feel it. The same around here. So frustration doesn't really get to me. And I get out and punch a tennis ball around and take a swim, and that really helps a lot."

Since he took office he has appeared nearly 40 times at congressional hearings, and his trademark has been frankness.

Zarb is devoted to the Ford policy that oil and natural gas must be priced realistically to reflect its true value in the economy. In the market place, that would mean higher prices and hence lower consumption. But price differences between new and old domestic oil, and between domestic and imported oil, argue against the Zarb-Ford approach.

Won't domestic oil producers get rich, the critics ask? Zarb says a windfall profits tax would take care of that, and much of the tax revenue would be turned back to lower-and fixed-income families as tax deductions or rebates on their electric bills.

That is the short term — into the 1980s. The long-term answer requires the short-term answer plus new energy development to make the nation independent of foreign oil and gas, Zarb says.

"I think when you get to the guy on the street who works for a living and thinks a little bit about his country; when he understands we've given up our independence to these cartel people (foreign producers), and they have been holding us up, he's ready to roll up his sleeves.

"But he wants to understand that we're climbing out of the problem. He doesn't want to hear about the Congress and the President and all that crap. He really wants to hear that his government understands the problem and has a solution."

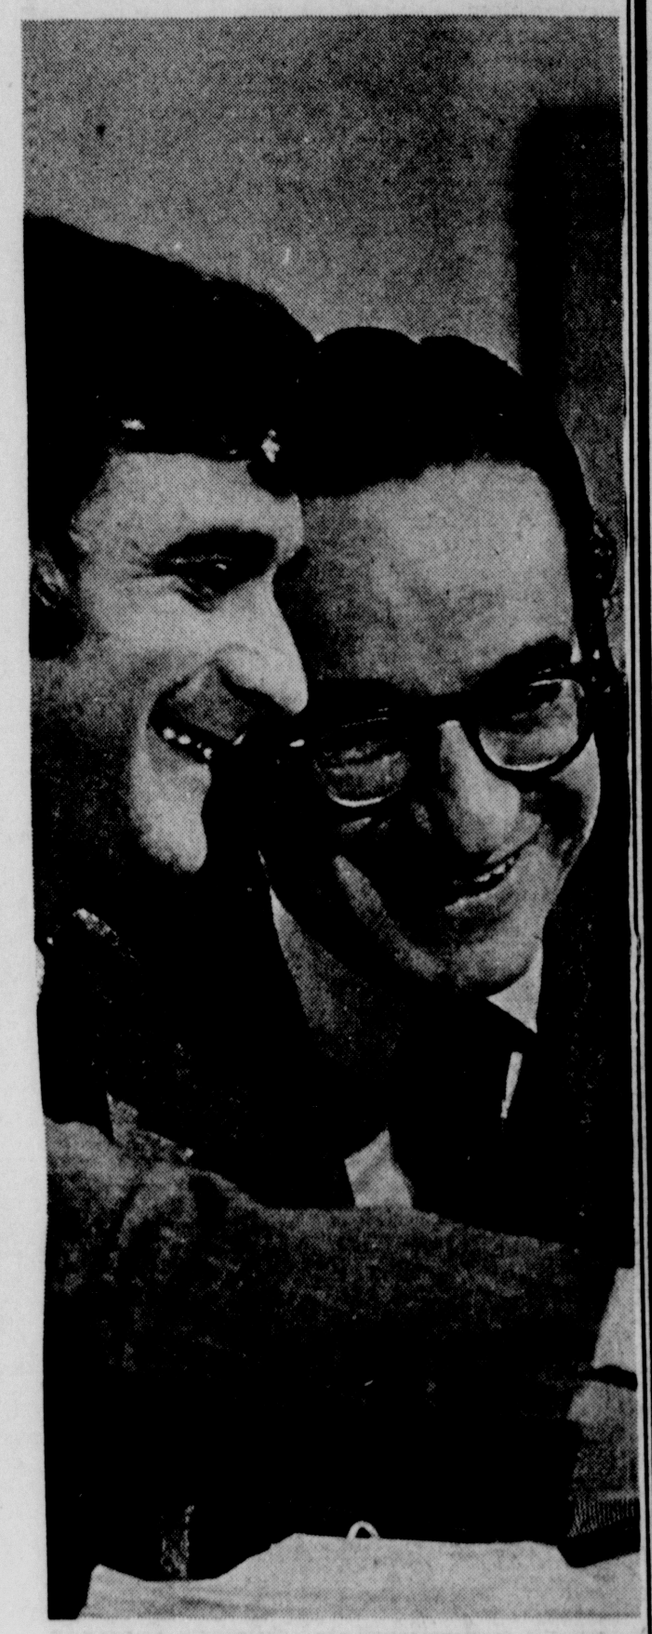
Zarb's basi quarrel with Congress boils down to cheap energy and the political popularity of holding down oil and gasoline prices. "When they start rolling back oil (prices) in the public interest to save the life of the consumer, they'll run our consumption up and the cartel will stick it right in our ears."

If he has one wish, one key priority, it's to get a workable program through Congress. "We'll get to that," he says, "but it's going to be a long, hard row.

"If we could take John Dingell (D-Mich.) and Al Ullman (D-Ore.), and two key guys from the Senate side — I don't know who they're going to be, probably Russell Long (D-La.) and Scoop Jackson (D-Wash.) and myself — and we could go into a room for two days, maybe one day, and leave politics outside, forget who's running for president, I believe we could walk out of that room with a program that we could submit to both houses and to the President that would be acceptable.

"That's how close we are in terms of getting it done, and yet how far. If we were unrestrained by politics, it would be no problem."



LIGHT MOMENT — Energy czar Zarb and Alan Greenspan, chief of the President's council of economic advisors, share a chuckle over a glass of water as they prepared to testify before the House energy and power subcommittee. Says Greenspan: "Zarb is one of the most effective people in the administration. He has a useful combination of understanding analytical problems and knowing how to deal with the political environment."

Says Ford soaks poor

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State Sen. Alfred Alquist says President Ford's oil and energy program is a plan to "soak the poor."

In a statement Wednesday, Alquist said if gasoline prices need to be raised to reduce consumption, "the money should go to help finance alternate forms of transportation for those forced out of their cars — not to benefit oil companies."

Says British labor government forced him to flee from home

By PHYLLIS CANNON
P-B Staff Writer

Thomas Perry, 68, and two of his five sons crossed the Atlantic and the continental United States to live in Southern California and work under the free-enterprise system.

One short year ago, Perry and his sons, along with their wives and a group of grandchildren, left Liverpool, England, bound for California where two sons already had lived for the past six years.

Only one son, Thomas Jr., 44, remained behind to mind the family roofing business.

The father and the two younger sons, James, 34, and Anthony, 28, now are partners in Weatherwell Tile at 17140 Highland Ave., Fontana, and two additional sons (the two who earlier had migrated to California) work for them. They are Gordon Henry, 46, and William, 38.

They're in production this week, turning out concrete roofing tile at the rate of one a second on a machine imported from Ireland and installed by an Irish engineer, in a 295-foot-long building the Perry men constructed.

They draw their water on the land which they own and from a well they dug.

Thomas Sr. and his wife, Susan, live in Cucamonga. Their four married sons all live in Alta Loma. There are 18 grandchildren.

One grandson, Gordon Jr., is married to a "Yank" named Vicky. The women in the family all have tasks at the tile plant. They are Gladys, who is married to William; Jean, James' wife; and Terry, who is married to Anthony.

There are 12 people on the payroll, Perry said, and they will need more laborers as the orders start coming in.

"The labor government drove me out of England," Perry explained. "It's next to communism. We came here because of the free enterprise system which allows a man to live according to his ability.

"You have the highest standard of living in the world. Here a man is rewarded for what he can do.

"A lot of people don't know it but they're better off here. Food is cheaper and better here than in England. And wages are three times better."

Ease juvenile court rules

In a revolutionary change in policy, newsmen now will be allowed to attend Los Angeles County Juvenile Court criminal hearings under an honor system in which reporters are bound not to use the names of the youthful offenders.

The change was proposed by Juvenile Court presiding Judge Richard A. Gadbois Jr. and was adopted by the executive committee of the Superior Court. It is now in effect.

The change acknowledges "a general and legitimate interest on the part of the recognized media in a particular case or in the work of the Juvenile Court," Gadbois said.

"Under no circumstances will the media representatives be permitted to give the name of any minor in the court or of his parents or guardians, nor will reporters be permitted to give any innformation which would reveal the identity of an involved minor or members of his family," Gadbois added, however.

Gadbois said he was convinced the press "will continue to respect their voluntary adopted code of ethics whereby the names of juveniles are not released to the public."

Under the new policy reporters will be able to attend sessions dealing with criminal matters but must obtain specific permission to sit in on hearings involving neglected, abused, truant or incorrigible children.

There is no law which forbids the media from using the names of offenders but law enforcement authorities are barred from releasing the names to reporters. Since law enforcement is the main source of such names, they are seldom used unless they are obtained somewhere else.

It was unclear what action, if any, the Juvenile Court would take in a case where reporters used the name of a juvenile on trial if they had obtained the name from source outside law enforcement.

$20 million Chaffey High budget

A $20 million 1975-76 budget will be presented for adoption by Chaffey Union High School board of trustees when it meets Monday at 7 p.m.

The budget will allow some reduction in the district's $2.5999 per $100 of assessed valuation tax rate, but probably less than the 12.96 cent cut reflected in the tentative budget the board accepted June 16.

Administrators are recommending that a part of that 12.96 cents be retained and used to remodel some Chaffey High School facilities.

Trustees will be asked to authorize a public hearing on the final 1975-76 budget 3 p.m. Aug. 1, in the district board room.

Plane expert now helping youth

Thomas C. Allen has had a lifetime of success, but at age 69 the Pomona resident has decided to take on a new challenge in trying to help children help themselves.

His goal is to help Pomona young people find work, not jobs, but small day work painting, pulling weeds, mowing lawns, making small repairs — anything that will keep youngsters busy and put a few dollars in their pockets.

"This problem with kids in Pomona is something else," said Allen, who has lived in Pomona only six months after living 47 years in Alhambra.

"Nobody is doing anything about it. But as long as I've decided to make my home here I might as well do what I can," he vowed.

Allen said he's not talking about much money, just finding things youths can do to earn a few dollars for a day's work.

"They've just got to learn that some kind of money is better than no kind of money," he explained.

A retired jet aircraft mechanic for Douglas Corp., Allen was one of two black pilots to first fly across the United States in 1932 from Los Angeles to New York in 41 hours. He was also the first mechanic for Braniff Airlines.

But his energies are no longer devoted to aviation, having been replaced by his commitment to youth.

"It's always possible to turn a kid around. They've just got to be taught to get into the system, to do something for themselves," he said.

Allen, who resides at 1704 Gayley Court, said he only will ask that youths come forward and ask for work and he'll find something for them. He invited persons to call 629-0560.

MOVING DAY

And that's Upland.

When John Hawkins of the James-Jones Co., a manufacturer of fire plugs, saw plans for Upland's new City Hall, he decided that the new attractive civic center deserved an unusual fire hydrant.

So when the city ordered a standard fire hydrant for necessary fire protection purposes, the company created the chrome-plated fire hydrant as its gift to the citizens of Upland.

While the new city hall was dedicated last October, the shiny hydrant was not installed until this summer when water lines were completed and the landscaping added around the city hall and the adjacent Upland Public Library.

Harry Rohrbach, Upland's water utility director, said each fire hydrant head cost $175, which is what the city actually paid for the new special hydrant.

While officials in other cities may turn green with envy at Upland's newest addition, the fire hydrant won't turn color. It'll stay shiny and bright.

Delinquency program seeks funds

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

As Project Upstream nears the end of its second successful year, its coordinators are examining potential financing for the delinquency prevention program's future.

It is a joint venture of Boys Republic and Pomona Unified School District coordinated by Pete and Jo-Ann Burns. The preventive program has been financed primarily by the Boys Republic board of trustees which contributed $150,000 and the Rosenberg Foundation that appropriated $60,000 for three years' operation.

Pomona donated a full-time secretary, Janice Redd, through Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds. Cal Poly donates social service majors as volunteers. Pomona Valley Juvenile Diversion Project provides funds for its referrals.

"Our deep concern is where does the financing come from at the end of the pilot program if the pilot program is successful? asked Joseph Rice, Boys Republic trustee. "And we feel it is successful, so we've got to start looking for funds."

Since its beginning in September 1973, the project has expanded from the target schools of Marshall and Palomares junior high schools to include Emerson Junior High School, moved into a two-story structure at 564 N. San Antonio Ave. with the help of Pomona city planning and community relations departments, and developed a community day care program with the help of Boys Republic High School and the Pomona school district office.

"The program is a way to make individuals accountable for their actions and behavior," Burns said. "It's designed to induce a better form of communication between students and school staffs."

The Burnses work primarily with assistant principals and counselors of the three target schools. They are frequent visitors to campuses and students accept them as familiar but non-establishment faces. If a student encounters a problem and is referred to the program by school, police or community agencies, the Burnses sit down with the youngster and take an "attitude check."

"We talk with the youngsters to see what his feelings are at the time of

Apologist role for FBI chief

After two years as director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Clarence M. Kelley is found in the role of apologist for some of the FBI's least defensible activities. His disturbing remarks about breakins without warrant, the accumulation of "dirt" files on prominent persons, and attempted disruption of political groups in official disfavor should provoke reflections in Congress on better means of holding the FBI to constitutional guidelines.

In each case — the warrantless breakins in the name of national security, the files on public personalities, the Cointelpro operations — Kelley was in the position of defending use of questionable means for supposedly good ends. Just such a rationale is put forward by authoritarian governments — which generally define "good ends" as the welfare of the state — in justification of activities deplored in democratic societies.

We do not intend to suggest that Kelley favors police state tactics, though some of what he defends borders on this. We do note that the thrust of the Constitution is to define and limit means the government may employ in its dealings with individual citizens.

Kelley's was the first official confirmation of the FBI practice, over a period of several years, of undertaking warrantless breakins and burglaries to get what he called "information relative to the security of the nation." It can be persuasively argued that the government has a legitimate need for information of this kind. Objection focuses on the business of getting it without first obtaining a warrant as the Fourth Amendment requires. Kelley dismisses this by saying he does not consider such "surreptitious entries" illegal.

As to amassing files of unevaluated information on the personal lives and habits of public personalities, including members of Congress, Kelley says this will continue to be done. He maintains, in effect, that the FBI can't be bothered with eliminating errors or dirt, and says the only "abuse" comes when such information gets out. We do not agree. The practice itself is repugnant, and should be discontinued except where there is solid reason to suspect that there have been or are about to be violations of the law.

The FBI director had kind words for the notorious Cointelpro effort, too, justifying it on grounds that its intent was "to do something that would ultimately . . . benefit the nation." Maybe so, but what harm was done meanwhile by interfering with dissent — dissent protected by the First Amendment? Kelley's defense of these activities is a disquieting herald of his third year in office.

Not semantics

The question is whether the CIA in the White House was an infiltration or just a presence — and anyone who thinks that's just semantics gets a D-minus.

Ford to veto consumer bill

WASHINGTON — President Ford is determined, according to confidential White House minutes, to veto legislation creating a Consumer Protection Agency.

The proposed agency would take the consumers' side in proceedings before the regulatory agencies and policy-making councils. The Senate has approved the new agency and the House is expected to follow suit.

But at a strategy session with Republican congressional leaders, the President swore: "I'll continue to oppose it."

"I think," volunteered Sen. John Tower, R.-Tex., "we could sustain a veto in the Senate." He is chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee.

The confidential minutes show that the President objected, most of all, to the $60 million he estimated the proposed agency would cost over the next three years.

He said his consumer adviser, Virginia Knauer, "is working to see that each agency has a good consumer protection section." He saw "no need", therefore, "for a separate new agency."

There was only one, lone Republican voice pleading for the consumer agency. Rep. Frank Horton, R.-N.Y., begged the President to reconsider. "Let me urge you," he said, "to change your views." The proposed agency would be able to battle more effectively in Washington for the consumers, he argued.

"Basically, its function is to present the views of the consumers," he said. "I hope you won't veto it."

The President rejected his appeal. "I have a firm conviction," he said, "there should be no new programs."

"I agree with you . . ." chimed in Rep. John Erlenborn, R.-Ill. "People are coming to feel that they're getting more government than they can afford."

"I agree with Erlenborn," said House Republican leader John Rhodes. "I don't think the American people want it."

"Is there a Republican alternative?" asked Rep. John Anderson, R.-Ill., the House GOP conference chairman.

"The basic concept is wrong," insisted Erlenborn.

Vice President Nelson Rockefeller contended that the present powers of the Attorney General to intervene in behalf of the consumers merely had "led us into much litigation which really didn't help the consumers."

The President agreed. "It would really slow down the agencies," he added.

"I put objections in the (Congressional) Record from several cabinet officers," spoke up Sen. Carl Curtis, R.-Neb., the Senate Republican Conference chairman.

Lonely Frank Horton was overruled.

TITO'S REVENGE: The Yugoslav government has jailed its famed dissident writer Mihajlo Mihajlov on fraudulent evidence, we have discovered. The prosecution used a well-meaning letter from a Connecticut engineer in an attempt to show Mihajlov was conspiring with exile groups.

But Mihajlov swears he does not know the engineer who, even in his letters, makes no claim of ever having met the "Solzhenitsyn of Yugoslavia."

Mihajlov was arrested last October for the unpardonable offense of publishing books and articles critical of Yugoslavia. No less a personage than President Josip Tito personally denounced him.

At the writer's trial, along with standard Communist charges of "spreading hostile propaganda," the prosecutors produced a letter from one "Raymond Cooper" to Mihajlov. A court observer from the International League for the Rights of Man reports the mysterious letter, "for reasons of security," was read only in a closed session.

The letter was supposed to prove Mihajlov was conspiring with American exile groups. But Cooper was not identified, and Mihajlov passionately swore he knew no such man. Nevertheless, he was convicted and dispatched to the somber Sremska Mitrovich prison for a seven-year term.

Meanwhile, we have located Raymond Cooper in Cos Cob, Conn., and obtained copies of letters he wrote to Mihajlov. Far from intending malice, Cooper told us, he wrote only out of "compassion."

Of Yugoslavian ancestry himself, Cooper told us that "even with strangers . . . there may exist true comradeship."

A clue to why the crucial letter was kept out of open court may be its fulminations against the 82-year-old Tito. But there is also this ringing statement on freedom:

"Should the society of free men the world over cease to produce and support men of your (Mihajlov's) courage and faith, then it will be a sad day for humanity."

Housing starts? No. Bicentennial souvenir stands.

Just in jest

It has often been said that if we would do away with the male rulers and turn the world over to the women, things would soon take a turn for the better. — An old wives' tale if ever I heard one! For somehow women heads of state just don't seem to be doing so well these days. — First it was Golda Meir who fell by the wayside. Now, in Argentina, President Maria Estela Peron is having her troubles. And look what is happening to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in India. Of course, in England we perhaps have the exception which proves the rule. However, as the British are so fond of pointing out: Come Hell or high water there will always be an England. — But judging by the cacophony of dissent evidenced at the recent U.N. Conference on Women, held in Mexico City, the major lesson to come out of that gathering seems to be that when women start arguing about their right to run the world along with the men, the first thing they create is a veritable Tower of Babel.

Ford ignores Solzhenitsyn

(Copley News Service)

If there's one thing that sends Soviet leaders into orbit faster than a Soyuz spacecraft could, it's the mere mention of the name of Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

And apparently some of President Ford's foreign policy advisers are so nervous about bruising the sensibilities of the Soviets that they have persuaded him not to meet the man who is considered by many to be the world's greatest living writer and its most profound spokesman for human freedom and morality.

There are two ironies in this.

First, that the White House refusal to see Solzhenitsyn came during the very week the United States was celebrating its independence as the haven of human liberty. And, second, that the Soviets — despite their sweet talk to us about detente — carry on elsewhere a constant barrage of speeches and articles vilifying the United States and its Western allies. Presumably, in the "spirit of detente," we are expected to ignore the worldwide anti-U.S. campaign.

Solzhenitsyn was in Washington the week of July 4 for his first public appearance before an American audience. George Meany and the AFL-CIO sponsored the event, and Solzhenitsyn held spellbound an audience of 2,500, including many dignitaries.

He was frankly critical of Western policy toward the Soviet Union.

He described detente as a "senseless process of endless concessions to aggressors" which can only get worse unless we decide to become visibly firm in our dealings with the Soviets.

No doubt this kind of talk is unsettling to Secretary Henry Kissinger and his diplomatists, but Solzhenitsyn's credentials are hard to deny. He is a Russian who loves his country, but not its government. He understands, certainly better than most Americans, the Russian psyche and Soviet behavior patterns.

White House representatives were conspicuously absent from the dinner. Press Secretary Ron Nessen gave out a succession of reasons why there wouldn't be a meeting between Solzhenitsyn and the President. First, the President couldn't attend the dinner because he was scheduled to be at a party for his daughter.

Then, it seems, there wouldn't be a subsequent meeting because Solzhenitsyn hadn't requested one. Next, Nessen said, the President doesn't ordinarily meet with private foreign personages (he met that very week with Brazilian soccer star Pele).

Then, "For image reasons, the President does like to have some substance in his meetings. It is not clear what he would gain in a meeting with Solzhenitsyn." For "substance," the President has met recently with the Strawberry Queen of West Virginia and the Maid of Cotton.

Finally, the real reason for the snub surfaced: a visit with Solzhenitsyn would violate the "spirit of detente."

Frequently, the West German government uses the phrase "detente without illusions." The phrase suggests that detente offers both hope and danger. Apparently, our government hasn't learned it yet.

If past Soviet behavior is any example, they might even have responded — indirectly — in a positive manner to a Ford-Solzhenitsyn meeting. They might have responded with some signal — however slight — of relaxation of some of the more visible signs of repression. (Remember how they stepped up approvals of emigration of Russian Jews from the Soviet Union about the time the trade bill was being debated?)

On the other hand, the Soviets might have flown into a rage, as the President's advisers feared, and even canceled the latest grain deal. One thing is for certain, though. They wouldn't have stalked out of the Strategic Arms Limitation (SALT) II talks. The proposed agreement already tilts in their favor.

Heartline

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions. It costs you nothing. Write to Heartline, 8514 North Main St., Dayton, Ohio, 45415.

Heartline: Will Medicare cover a chiropractor's services? Mrs. S.

Answer: Yes, but only for manual manipulation of the spine to correct a subluxation shown by Xray. Medicare does not pay for the Xray or for any other services by chiropractors.

Heartline: Will Medicare cover a glass eye? Mrs. J.M.

Answer: Yes, under most circumstances.

Heartline: Will Medicare cover a corneal transplant? Mr. B.

Answer: Yes.

Heartline: Is there any difference between your guide to Medicare and the governments Medicare Handbook? Is your guide designed to replace the government Medicare Handbook, and how much is it? Mrs. C.D.

Answer: Yes, there is a great difference. No, Heartline's guidebook is not designed to replace the government Medicare handbook. We recommend that every one have the government handbook, and point out that the government handbook can be obtained at any Social Security office.

Heartline's guidebook to Medicare is in easy-to-understand, question and answer form, and covers most of what the government handbook covers; plus, our guidebook goes into more detail as to what Medicare will and will not cover. Heartline's Guide to Medicare costs $1.50, and if for any reason you are not satisfied with our guide, we will promptly refund the full $1.50. To order, send a letter to Heartline's Guide to Medicare, 8514 North Main St., Dayton, Ohio, 45415.

Dr. Miller

Pictures help, if pet is lost

All pet owners should have current color photographs, head-on and side view of their pets. These are handy to have on hand if your animal, bird, dog, cat or whatever, becomes lost, especially vacationing.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Do you have such a thing as a baby feeding formula for pigeons? I'm trying to find a substitute for pigeon "milk," but so far haven't. —D.S.

DEAR D.S.: While the "milk" produced by parent pigeons is admittedly superior, the following formula is adequate for the birds, baby pigeons in particular: Use well-moistened dog food and beat in thoroughly about five per cent by weight raw egg. The mixture should be quite thin for newborn pigeons, thicker for older ones. Not incidentally, Papa Pigeon is really distinctive where feeding's concerned since he, too, produces "milk" for his young.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Jimbo's young but already sneaky. He takes after his mother who snuck out of an opening door and dashed into the street to be killed by a car. We had always walked her on a leash and planned to do the same with Jimbo. Is there some kind of training we can give him, though, so that if he does break loose or sneak out he won't dash into the street to be killed? I don't see how you can train a dog not to cross the street when they are not on a leash if you have them leashed when you are crossing streets all the time. —S.N.

DEAR S.N.: A good point. Obedience training provides a satisfactory answer. As part of Jimbo's heel training, he should be required to meet a "sit, stay" command. That stay should be held until a "come" command is given and then he can cross the street with you (on the leash). If he is always taught to sit, stay when first approaching that curb, he should do the same on or off the leash. If he is sufficiently obedience-trained and if the exercise is ALWAYS carried out, he would presumably never cross the street without permission.

Utilizing the same technique, you can teach him always to sit in front of a door and not go through it until he receives a "come" command also. Next to you, a leash can still be your dog's friend, but a well-trained dog will always behave in such a manner that his chances for survival off the leash are greatly increased.

Ann Landers

Policing kids—parents cop out

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 30-year-old mother of four children who is sick and tired of hearing parents cop out when it comes to correcting their children.

The two most over-used excuses are, "Oh, he'll grow out of it. This is just a stage he's going through" — and, "Ignore it. He's trying to get my dander up. He'll quit pretty soon."

What are parents for, anyway? Aren't they supposed to discipline their children? Or do they think it's enough that they feed, house, clothe them and sit by with their eyes closed and mouths shut and let them "go through phases"?

When I was growing up, I knew exactly what was expected of me and how far I could go. I'm grateful for those firm guidelines. They relieved me of a lot of decision-making and kept me out of trouble.

I hope every parent who reads your column will ask himself, "Who is setting the standards and drawing the perimeters for my child?" Is it the TV, the neighborhood gang or YOU? Values and limits should be established by Mother and Dad. — Concerned About Today's Youth

Dear Concerned: Thank you for an excellent letter. I hope you woke up a few moribund brains.

Dear Ann: I am a 16-year-old girl who has sold many things door-to-door such as Girl Scout cookies, raffle tickets, and candy.

In the past two years, five men have appeared at the door completely naked. Most of the incidents were at apartments. The latest one was last week when I was selling candy for a school fund-raising project.

I have checked with two girlfriends and they admitted the same thing has happened to them. You may not want to print this letter, but I'd like to know if it is against the law for a man to answer his door nude.

We don't want to make trouble for anybody, but we'd like an answer. — Wondering

Dear Wondering: There is no law that says a person cannot walk around nude in his own home. A man or woman who displays himself in the manner described in your letter, however, could be arrested for indecent exposure in certain jurisdictions.

Dear Ann Landers: I am frustrated and irritated and don't know what to do. So I'm doing what so many others have done before me — I'm writing to Ann Landers.

The problem is my grandchildren — 14 and 15 years of age. For years I have been sending them birthday and Christmas gifts and I have yet to receive a single acknowledgment. Their mother may casually mention, often months later, that "Debbie loved the blouse" or "Tim really appreciated the check," but from the children — nothing.

Should I continue to send them gifts and be satisfied with the knowledge that I have been thoughtful? Or should I stop and hope they get the message? — Puzzled

Dear P.: Sorry you didn't write to me a long time ago. I could have saved you some money. To send gifts year after year with no acknowledgment is brainless. Too bad their mother didn't teach them some decent manners. "As the twig is bent . . ."

One of life's greatest mysteries

My goodness, the children have only been out of school for six weeks. Time flies when you're under sedation, doesn't it?

As I was hiding from them in the back seat of the car just last week it occurred to me that I don't know children at all. I'm raising three of them and yet they remain one of life's greatest mysteries.

For example, I don't understand how come a child can climb up on the roof, scale the TV antenna and rescue the cat . . . yet cannot walk down the hallway without grabbing both walls with his grubby hands for balance.

Or how come a child can eat yellow snow, kiss the dog on the lips, chew gum that he has found in the ashtray, put his mouth over a muddy garden hose nozzle . . . and refuse to drink from a glass his brother has just used.

Why is it he can stand with one foot on first base while reaching out and plucking a baseball off the ground with the tips of his fingers . . . yet cannot pick up a piece of soap before it melts into the drain.

Explain to me how he can ride a bicycle, run, play ball, set up a camp, swing, fight a war, swim and race for eight hours . . . and has to be driven to the garbage can.

It puzzles me how a child can see a dairy bar three miles away, but cannot see a 4 x 6 rug that has scrunched up under his feet and has been dragged through two rooms.

Why is it a child can reject a hot dog with mustard served on a soft bun at home . . . yet eat six of them two hours later at 50 cents each.

How come I can trip over a kid's shoes under the kitchen sink, in the bathroom, on the front porch, under the coffee table, in the sandbox, in the car, in the clothes hamper and on the washer . . . but we can never find them when it is time to cut the grass.

Why is the sun hotter delivering papers than it is goofing around . . . when it is the same sun?

How come they can't remember what time they're supposed to be home, but they remember they did dishes a week ago Wednesday two nights in a row because we had spaghetti and a spoon got caught in the disposal and they traded off.

Dr. Lamb

The great flap over vitamins

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am seriously concerned for my family over something I read recently.

The article said that the body cannot throw off excess vitamins A and D. It went on to say the constant excess could cause brain damage, especially in children.

I give my children any one of a half dozen brands of vitamin pills daily, one pill contianing 3500 U.S.P. units of A, which is already 40 per cent more than a two to six year old needs according to its own label. These are vitamins for children. They contain 400 U.S.P. units of D. According to the article I read these are the maximum amounts we should consume in a day.

Have you ever noticed how much vitamin A and D is added to our milk and other dairy products, cereals, etc? We were drinking a gallon of milk a day before. Now I can't find any milk without it.

Why are we forced to accept this, wowie, instant energy, fortified, vitamin packed hogwash? A balanced diet with a vitamin supplement for a possible deficiency should be sufficient. But please, reduce the amount of A and D.

Am I wrong to be so concerned, or it is time someone does something about this?

DEAR READER — No you are not wrong. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has set safe limits on how much A and D could be in daily vitamin preparations without a doctor's prescription. This action was to protect people from innocently taking too much of these vitamins and exposing themselves to A and D toxicity. The Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) is well below the maximum you can tolerate.

The efforts by a group of knowledgable scientists to protect the public from vitamin abuses are threatened by the actions of an interested group of Senators and Congressmen, none of whom are distinguished by any knowledge in medicine, but all of whom know which position to take to get elected. As a result, large amounts of some vitamins will continue to be available as "super" this and "super" that which may mislead many people into thinking this is the way to go for super health.

People on a marginal diet for any reason which cannot be corrected should take a daily vitamin tablet. I don't object to this. Taking excess unneeded vitamins, however, only enriches special interest groups marketing vitamins and so called health foods.

For information on daily requirements of vitamins, minerals and nutrition send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope to me in care of The Progress Bulletin, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York NY 10019, and ask for The Health Letter number 4-60 on Balanced Diet.

Since so many of our foods are now enriched I am having to think again about the advisability of recommending a daily vitamin pill. You are right, with A and D in milk, cereals and other foods the vitamins have already been added. We are all taking vitamin pills in our food. A good well balanced diet with these added vitamins can hardly fail to provide plenty of vitamins without pressing our luck and taking additional A and D.

I'd prefer that people ate the right foods and used the milk with the added vitamins, then stopped the vitamin pill rather than stopping the food and popping vitamins. You might go this route.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The opportunity to call favorable attention to your work or a pet project exists today. Your best will not go unnoticed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others won't have the same sense of urgency regarding your plans as you have. Delegate as little as possible.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Small mistakes are possible in your business transactions today. Count pennies as carefully as the dollars.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's important to iron out any small points in agreements you make today. They could later prove to be a thorn in the flesh.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be overly concerned with the share of the burden your co-workers carry. Just be certain you're doing your part.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Respect any confidence given you today. There's one in particular you could tell who would foul things up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Normally you are judicious in your conversation. Today, however, you could carelessly put a family member in a bad light.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Accept methods proven by your own experience. Someone who hasn't tried them could attempt to convince you they won't work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be outspoken if you know an item can be purchased at a better price. The vendor will adjust to your terms.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It will be difficult to please 100 per cent someone you're teamed up with today. The difference will prove insignificant in the end.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll handle responsibilities admirably today. Surprisingly, you may have a touch of remorse about things left undone.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll have a good time socially today if you don't insist on hanging around till the last dog's hung.

Your Birthday, July 21, 1975

Contacts you'll make this year can fatten your bankbook. Don't be hesitant if you're asked to join a new club or group.

Boosting baby's life expectancy

Some laboratory researchers now say they think they can increase a newborn baby's life expectancy by 40 per cent. How? By feeding said infant 60 per cent fewer calories shortly after its birth than is normally given to babies. Dandy, if true. Their findings come from experiments on little animals.

HORSEMEN

Q. "Which were the best horsemen among the American Indians?"

A. The Apaches were the first to own horses. The Camanches were the best riders. The Nez Perce were the best breeders.

A. About one in 2,000.

A. A daughter of Queen Victoria.

CRAWLERS

The centipede, which is supposed to have 100 legs, only has about 40. The millipede, which is supposed to have 1,000 legs, only has 100 maybe 200. A centipede at top speed can carry itself on as few as four legs at a time. That millipede, though, keeps more legs on the ground than in the air. The centipede can move a lot faster than can a millipede in traveling, say, across the back of your neck.

DID I EVER tell you a crocodile can't swim without rolling over and over unless it swallows enough rocks to counterbalance its tail? And the weight of the rock ballast is always in precise ratio to the tail weight. A few croc experts are so savvy they can just look at one of those big beasts and tell you how many pounds of rocks are in it.

GET IT RIGHT

"The bigger they come, the harder they fall." Boxer Bob Fitzsimmons said that, all right. But not before he fought Jim Jeffries, as I reported. He said it just before he knocked out Ed Dunkhorst who weighed more than 300 pounds. Jeffries beat Fitzsimmons twice, incidentally. I didn't get that right, either. Rats!

Q. "HOW DO YOU account for the fact that more men than women sell women's shoes while more women than men sell men's underwear?"

A. Most shoe sellers get paid commissions. Most underwear sellers don't. That seems to be the explanation, although maybe it ought not to be. Why far more men than women tackle commission sales jobs remains a matter for debate.

Jacoby's bridge

Unnecessary bid necessary

By Oswald & James Jacoby

One of the most interesting concepts in the language of bids is that of the unnecessary bid.

Basically, this can be stated as follows: When a player can go directly to, what looks like, the proper final game contract, he can invite a slam by making an unnecessary bid along the way.

North can bid four spades directly over his partner's two spade call. On the other hand he is just a trifle strong for that bid. At the same time he does not want to go past game if his partner has a minimum opening.

He solves this problem by bidding three clubs. He knows that South will not pass, since the new suit bid following a two-over-one response is an absolute force.

South rebids three notrump and now, when North goes to four spades, South sees that North was heading to that spot in any event. He sees that he has taken the trouble to bid clubs on the way.

South has considerably more than a minimum and bids five hearts to show first round control of that suit.

Six spades makes easily. In fact if North and South reached seven and South gave it the absolutely perfect play, they would make that contract.

Ask the Jacobys

Today's question is from Arizona. Our reader asks: "What do you think of artificial one-club openings?"

Our answer is that it is possible to develop workable systems based on using one club as a forcing bid. All these systems are far too complicated for any but expert players. The club system mongers claim they are simple, but actually they are far more complicated than standard American types.

Un servicio directo de omnibus entre Pomona y el centro de Los Angeles es posible que empiece en agosto, 1, de acuerdo con noticias de la compania Southern California Rapid Transit.

El Concejo Municipal de Pomona recientemente aprobo un servicio de parqueo usando el antigua campo de aterrizaje de los helicopteros, situado en las calles Comercial y Park Avenue. El servicio se espera que sea aprobado por el Comite Director de RTD en su reunion de julio 16.

Tentativamente los planes incluyen el uso de cuatro onnibus, que partiran cada 30 minutos. Los viajes hacia los Angeles se iniciaran a las 6 a.m., y conticuaran hasta las 7:30 a.m.

Los viajes de retorno a Pomona desde el centro de Los Angeles empezaran a las 4 p.m. y el ultimo sera a las 5:30 p.m.

El precio del pasaje en una direccion se supone que sea de 50 centavos.

Un servicio similar para pasajeros empezo la semana pasada desde Eastland Shopping Center, en Covina. Los oficiales dijeron que el numero de pasajeros excedio los calculos que se hicieron, teniendo necesidad de agregar nuevos omnibus a los senalados desde el primer dia de la operacion.

the incident or problem. This gives him the chance to express himself," Mrs. Burns said, "and we can see how receptive or non-receptive he is to help."

Client cooperation is stressed. With this in mind a contract is drawn up, outlining who is to do what and defining expectations of project coordinators, students and parents. Parents are an essential ingredient and are brought into counseling.

If a student reneges within 30 days that contract is re-evaluated and he is dropped.

"He must be motivated," Burns said.

The Burns and Byron Wafer, a Chaffey College student working in the program, monitor behavior of their 40 enrollees on a weekly basis. They also rely on behaviorial and progress reports from counselors and ve principals; and family group conversations ithe home and at the centraPomona facility.

Theproject provides work and learning, adaptig both to interests of indidual students.

"Wehave the kids do what ley enjoy doing in the ommunity or neighborhod. For example, one oy really likes pets so h helps people in his neighborhood train and exercise eir dogs," burns said.

When astudent is doing well enogh in the community and school he is placed in an independent category and must monitor his own behavior. Many students have moved from this independent category and become volunteers in the program. Laura Beattie, a former referral, is now employed by Project Upstream as a youth counselor.

The day school program at Boys Republic High School is an "alternative for the kids who have been or are about to be expelled and can't make it in a community setting," Mrs. Burns said.

Ken Cooper, director of pupil personnel services for Pomona schools, and Glen Venard, Boys Republic principal, help the Burnses with this phase of the program.

"Parents must come in and offer information on the student and explain their opinions on whether the child will fit into the day school program," Burns said.

If parents refuse to talk with school officials, the youngster cannot be accepted into the program.

Milt Holmen and Joan Wolfgang, program evaluators, reported that the project will expand its day school program in 1975-76 and plans an augmentation school. This latter would be an after-school program to deal with educational deficiencies, Holmen said.

Project Upstream has been accepted and applauded by school officials, parents and students. It deals not only with troublesome youngsters, but also those with special emotional problems.

Color the economic forecast rosy

NEW YORK (AP) — The recent trickle ot promising economic news turned into a flood this past week.

From the Commerce Department came news the nation's real Gross National Product fell only 0.3 per cent in the second quarter, compared with the first quarter plunge of 11.4 per cent.

This, according to presidential spokesman Ron Nessen, was almost proof positive that the economy has bottomed out and "is beginning to go up."

Further laying the groundwork for an economic recovery, the government reported that business inventories declined a record $2.97 billion in May. It was the fourth monthly decline in a row, and was taken as a sign that businesses are unclogging their stockpiles of unsold goods and soon will be ready to step up production and hire back workers again.

Linked to that, the Federal Reserve reported its index of industrial production — considered a crucial and accurate indicator by economic forecasters — rose in June for the first time in nine months.

The Commerce Department's personal income statistics, meanwhile, showed the effects of one-time $50 payments to Social Security, railroad retirement and supplemental security income recipients distributed last June 1. Personal income in June rose a record $30.6 billion, and much of that money should spur sales in sagging consumer goods markets.

With the apparent beginning of an economic recovery also came government statistics showing a welcome cooling in inflation. In the second quarter, the annually-adjusted inflation rate was 5.1 per cent, the lowest since the end of 1972, and a sharp drop from 8.4 per cent in the first quarter, and 14.4 per cent in the final quarter of 1984.

These developments also sent the dollar strongly higher all last week, reaching new highs against the West German mark, Swiss franc and several other European currencies.

The dollar's gains were also bolstered by news that New York's First National City Bnk raised its prime lending rate ¼-point to 7½ per cent, making dollar investments by foreigners that much more profitable.

The week's blue spot, though, was the government statistic showing housing starts fell 5.2 per cent in June to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.07 million units, following a 15 per cent gain in May.

It was further reported that average mortgage rates, which dipped below 9 per cent recently, moved back above that mark again. With the average home now costing about $38,000, according to industry estimates, the latest government statistics raised the question whether the Ford administration's balancing act of fighting inflation while spurring an economic recovery might work for some industries, but not housing.

Housing and Urban Development Secretary Carla Hills remained optimistic, stating she believes a housing recovery is under way and should carry through 1976, but HUD does not expect that housing starts will increase without fail every month.

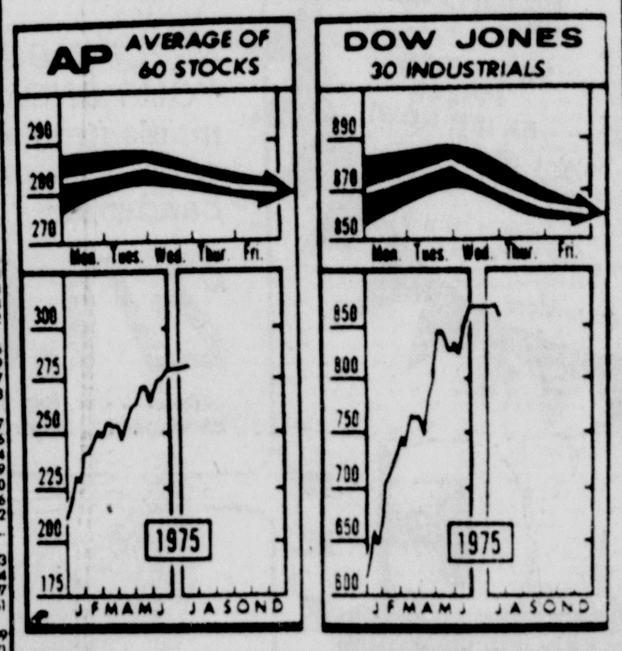
Wall Street's week closes down a little



Dow Jones industrial averages closed at 862.41 Friday, down 8.68 from the week before. The Associated Press average closed at 280.5, down 2.8 from Monday. Rising interest rates announced by some banks forced the market down slightly outweighing some signs of economic recovery in the present. But experts say falling inventories and consumer purchases give strong signs of recovery from the current recession.

RX FOR CURING CALIFORNIA's MALPRACTICE CRISIS

Establish A Time Limit — We believe two years is a reasonable time limit.

Limit Legal Fees — A reasonable limit on legal fees should be established, making sure patients will get the major share of awards.

Prevent Duplicate Payments — Juries are entitled to receive full information, such as tax-free status of awards, so they can make a fair decision.

Establish Fair Limits — We need reasonable upper limits to establish fair awards.

Spread Out Payments — A system is needed for spreading out awards over an extended period to take care of the patient's continuing needs.

Provide Prompt Arbitration — Many cases can be handled without the cost of a court trial. We need legislation to make this possible.

Enforce Medical Standards — We need to expand the powers and scope of the Board of Medical Examiners so incompetent physicians can be weeded out quickly and effectively.

I support these reforms and urge you to see that they receive top priority.

Wheat: most important crop

SOUTH HAVEN, Kan. (AP) — Golden grain hisses in an arch from the combine's outstretched arm into the waiting truck as Warren Knox smiles behind the glass of the combine cabin.

It is the happy smile of a man finally harvesting his wheat. Rain has delayed the national harvest two weeks. The combines should have finished in Kansas and moved on to Nebraska in early July.

The wheat harvest, now near the halfway point, appears to be a record one. But the price paid to farmers has dropped below $3 a bushel from more than $4.50 last fall and farmers are angry. For the second year in a row, many are engaged in what they call "orderly marketing" — refusing to sell their wheat until their action drives up the price.

"I haven't sold a bushel yet," Knox says. "I'm going to hold on for two or three months at least and see what prices do. If we can get our export market going, we'll get a better price."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says the 1975 American harvest will be 2.1 billion bushels. (It was nearly 1.8 billion in 1974.) One billion bushels or more are to be exported, much of it to India and other underdeveloped countries with hunger problems.

But export orders have been sluggish, partly because of good wheat harvests expected abroad and partly because buyers are waiting to get the lowest possible price.

As the last grain sweeps from the combine at the edge of his field, Knox revs the big engine and turns the machine to park it at roadside. The 53-year-old farmer was a B-17 bomber pilot during World War II, and he maneuvers the combine with a pilot's skill and grace.

Opening the cabin door, Knox pauses for a moment to study the low ceiling of gray clouds that hover over his 1,200 acres of wheat fields. "I sure would like to see some sunshine," he says.

Knox, his wife, Barbara, who drives the truck into which the combine dumps the wheat, and their 19-year-old son, Kenneth, operating a second combine, are attempting on this muggy, overcast afternoon in early July to cut 300 of the 73 million acres seeded in wheat by the nation's farmers.

Work grinds to a halt, however, as Ben Palen, a neighbor's son helping the Knox family, brings word from the local elevator operator that the grain can't be stored because it registers above the 15 per cent moisture content considered the maximum allowable.

The full extent of crop damage wrought by weather, plant diseases and pests is unclear now, but one farm expert estimates that more than a million acres of winter wheat has been lost in Kansas alone since last fall. Based on the 30-bushel average yield projected for the Kansas crop, about 30 million bushels of wheat have been destroyed, enough to make bread for 17 million people for a year.

Despite the loss, Kansas is expected to produce its second largest crop in state history, enough to feed the entire nation for half a year.

Warren Knox is dubious about statistics that go beyond the two square miles of his cropland, but the size of the 1975 crop worries him because the record yields predicted by USDA have contributed to steady declines in wheat prices.

"Maybe we're farming ourselves out of business," the wiry farmer said.

Just call it an unusual season

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's been an unusual season for Steve Garvey and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Instead of a National League dynasty some predicted when the team won the pennant last year, the Dodgers have been bothered by injuries and slumps and are far behind Cincinnati in the NL West.

The Dodgers always have projected a close-knit image but even that was questioned when an article last month quoted some players as being less than pleased with Garvey's public image.

What apparently stung the most was a comment that Garvey's wife, Cyndy, was overly eager for publicity herself.

Did the comments bother Garvey?

"Sure," the first baseman said.

"Anytime you have a personal affront on your family it would. But as for any effect on my play or the team, that would be so small."

Garvey said he decided personally that, "I'd rather do my talking with a bat and glove instead of in the media."

Since the incident Garvey has shaken a personal slump and paces the Dodgers, hitting just under .320 with nearly 60 runs batted in and 11 home runs.

Personal slumps alone haven't been the entire problem, Garvey said.

"We had a prolonged team slump and one of those things can become contagious," he said.

The entire Dodgers offense is sub-par this year, scoring 100 less runs than they had at this time in 1974.

"As (Manager) Walt Alston says, those runs would have won us a lot of games," said Garvey. He added, however, that he doesn't feel any added pressure to produce since he won the league's Most Valuable Player Award last season.

"I can't really put any more pressure on myself because when you do that you compound your problems," he said.

Garvey has driven in fewer runs this year than last, but says, "I approach each game the same way each day, to go out and do something to help us win whether it's a single, a sacrifice or a good defensive play."

As for the entire offense, he said, "We just haven't been consistent this year like we were last year.

"I'll say one thing, though," he added. "We've been swinging the bat. We haven't been going up there defensively and that's a good sign. When you do that you're bound to have things fall into place eventually."

With the season more than half over, Garvey said the Dodgers realize that there is not that much time left.

"You don't want to wait until it's too late and the mathematics start running against you," he said.

Garvey firmly rejected any idea that the Dodgers might be thinking they were out of the race.

"By no means have we conceded the race and by no means do we feel they (the Reds) are the better team. We just feel they've had a good streak and we haven't had ours yet.

"They're a very solid team, Cincinnati is," said Garvey. "But I think they have respect for us. They know they've gone really well and we've gone, well, mediocre."

Angels topple Indians twice

CLEVELAND (AP) — Second baseman Jack Brohamer's 10th-inning error gave California its go-ahead run, then Winston Llenas singled for the winner as the Angels beat Cleveland 3-2 for a sweep of their Saturday twi-night doubleheader.

Frank Tanana's five-hitter and Ellie Rodriguez' three runs batted in led the Angels to an 8-0 rout in the first game.

Mickey Rivers tripled off Dave LaRoche, 3-2, with one out in the 10th inning of the nightcap, then scored when Brohamer bobbled Dave Collins' two-out grounder. Collins then stole second and scored on Llenas' single to left.

Cleveland scored once in the bottom of the 10th on singles by Frank Duffy, Brohamer and Rick Manning.

The Indians got a seventh-inning run when Manning doubled, took third on a passed ball and scored on George Hendrick's sacrifice fly. California tied it in the eighth on Mike Miley's second home run of the year.

The Angels gave Tanana, 8-5, all the runs he needed in the fourth inning of the opener. Lee Stanton walked, stole second and came home on Rodriguez' single. Then Miley and Jerry Remy singled for another run.

California got three more and chased Dennis Eckersley, 6-3, in the fifth. Dave Collins walked, Joe Lahoud singled and Collins scored when second baseman Duane Kuiper misplayed Stanton's grounder. Dave Chalk's sacrifice fly scored Lahoud and Rodriguez singled Stanton home.

The Angels made it 6-0 in the seventh on Stanton's double, scored again in the eighth on Mickey Rivers' single, then wrapped it up with a run in the ninth on Rodriguez single.

Dodgers dumped in ninth

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Paciorek's wild throw gave Pittsburgh the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning and Rennie Stennett added a sacrifice fly as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-3 Saturday night.

Manny Sanguillen opened the ninth against Mike Marshall, 5-7, with a single. Mario Mendoza bunted for a sacrifice and was safe when first baseman Steve Garvey threw wide of the base.

Sanguillen went to third on the play, then scored when Paciorek, the left fielder, recovered the ball and threw wildly past second. Winner Dave Giusti, 4-3, bunted Mendoza to third and he came in on Stennett's fly ball to center.

Sanguillen had singled and scored on Stennett's triple off Don Sutton in the fourth but the Dodgers tied it in the eighth when Garvey doubled, was bunted to second on Bill Buckner's squeeze bunt.

The Dodgers took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on John Hale's bases-loaded single but the Pirates tied it in the third on Dave Parker's bases-loaded single.

The game marked the end of the season series between the two clubs, matched in last year's National League championship series. The Pirates won seven of the 12 games.

The Pirates continue their West Coast trip today in San Francisco, meeting the Giants in a doubleheader. Jim Rooker, 7-4, and Ken Brett, 5-2, are scheduled to start for Pittsburgh against Ed Halicki and Mike Caldwell. Los Angeles entertains the Chicago Cubs today with Burt Hooton, 6-9, opposing his former teammate, Bill Bonham.

In the Pirates' second, Sanguillen, who started the game with a .459 (17-for-37) average against Los Angeles pitching, doubled to left after two were out. But Don Sutton stranded him at second by striking out Mendoza.

The Dodgers got a runner to third after two were out in the second inning when Mendoza let Dave Lopes' easy grounder go through his legs for an error. Lopes then stole second and third, his 35th and 36th steals of the season, but Jerry Reuss struck out Paciorek to leave Lopes at third.

In Pittsburgh's half of the third inning, after Parker's single with the bases loaded tied the game 2-2, Sutton fanned Richie Zisk for the third out to leave runners at first and second.

An inning later, after Stennett's two-out triple scored Sanguillen to break the tie, Richie Hebner grounded to second baseman Lopes for the final out, leaving Stennett at third.

Sun loses Haden in 23-8 victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rookie Anthony Davis rushed for three touchdowns to lead the Southern California Sun to an easy 23-8 triumph over the Philadelphia Bell in a World Football League preseason game.

But the victory cost the Sun its backup quarterback, Pat Haden, who suffered what was thought to be a shoulder separation. Haden replaced Daryle Lamonica, who had undergone a hernia operation.

Davis gained 78 yards—15 more than the entire Bell team got on the ground.

The Bell didn't score until the final three minutes when halfback Frank McGuigan plunged over from the three-yard line.

Bell quarterback Bob Davis could manage only 34 yards in the air before King Corcoran came in to lead the team to its only score.

The Sun backfield ran at will through the Bell defense, racking up 219 yards on the ground. Meanwhile, the Bell offense sputtered. The highly-touted J.J. Jennings, a leading WFL rusher last season, got only 18 yards in six carries for the Bell.

The Bell, which played in antiquated JFK Stadium last season, switched to the University of Pennsylvania's Franklin Field this year.

Horse racing roundup

La Zanzara wins at Hollywood Pk.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — La Zanzara, who won the Beverly Hills Handicap last year, won the $80,250 Hollywood Park race again Saturday when she took the lead near the mile pole and scored a 3½ length victory.

The Aaron U. Jones owned 5-year-old carried 122 pounds, second only to second place Dulcia's 123. She returned $4.80, $2.40 and $2.20. The favored Dulcia returned $2.20 and $2.10. Mercy Dee, carrying 110 pounds, finished another six lengths behind in third place and paid $2.20.

La Zanzara, who defeated males in the $125,000 San Juan Capistrano at Santa Anita, volleyed for the early lead but dropped back between horses and was five lengths back at the half mile pole.

But she pulled ahead of Lucky Spell near the mile mark and gradually widened her lead.

Ridden by Don Pierce, she covered the 1⅜ miles over the firm turf track in 2:14 4-5.

Yonkers winner

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Surefire Hanover, the 3-5 favorite driven by Stanley Dancer, took the lead at the start and led all the way in winning the $200,000 Yonkers Trot at Yonkers Raceway Saturday night.

At the end of this first leg of the trotting Triple Crown, Surefire Hanover was 2½ lengths in front of Fashion Blaze, who in turn was 2½ lengths ahead of Skipper Walt. Time for the mile classic was 2:03.

Surefire, a 3-year-old son of Hickory Smoke, paid $3.20, $3 and $2.60. Fasion Blaze, a 10-1 hazard driven by James Larente, returned $7 and $4.80. Skipper Walt, a 40-1 outsider reined by Roland Beaulieu, paid $6 to show.

Forego triumphs

NEW YORK (AP) — Forego became a $1-million winner Saturday with a sizzling stretch drive that carried him to victory by a head over Arbees Boy in the $111,400 Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park.

The 15th stakes victory for the big 5-year-old gelding was worth $66,840 and boosted his earnings to $1,036,678. He is the 16th member of thoroughbred racing's millionaire club.

And Forego won under 134 pounds, from 16 to 26 pounds more than his six rivals carried.

Stained Glass favored

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Telly's Pop, the first horse owned by actor Telly Savalas, and Stained Glass are among the favorites for today's $137,400 Hollywood Juvenile Stakes at Hollywood Park.

Telly's Pop was purchased last year by Savalas and motion picture producer Howard W. Koch for $6,500. Now the 2year-old thoroughbred can win $79,000 in one race. A winner twice earlier this year, who will be ridden by Francisco Mena, Telly's Pop is a 7-2 choice.

Stained Glass, already a triple stakes winner, will be ridden by Laffit Pincay Jr. and is expected to go off as the favorite. The early line lists him at 5-2.

Each of the 2-year-olds in the field will carry 122 pounds for the six-furlong dash except Si Si You, who gets in at 117 as a maiden.

In post position order, the field will have Si Si You with Steve Valdez riding; Lexington Laugh, Fernando Toro; Stained Glass, Pincay; Craz Channon, Donald Pierce; Restless Restless, Sandy Hawley; Bit Bit, Jerry Lambert; Market Fever, Wayne Harris; Imacornishprince, Frank Olivares, and Telly's Pop, Mena.

Telly's Pop scored an impressive victory in the Haggin Stakes in which he was cut off at the start but circled the field to win going away.

Stained Glass enters the Juvenile with a recent victory in the Cabrillo Stakes. Earlier, he had won the Sir Francis Drake Stakes at Golden Gate Fields in Northern California and the Westchester Stakes at Hollywood Park.

Tom Hausman throws blanks

Pitcher Tom Hausman, formerly a student at Bonita High and a member of the La Verne Post 330 American Legion baseball team, pitched 6 1/3 innings of shutout relief for the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday.

Hausman entered the game against the Chicago White Sox in the third inning after Pat Kelly of the Sox tagged Milwaukee starter and loser Bill Travers for a one-out grand slam home run. Hausman finished the game on the mound, allowing two hits and four walks while striking out two batters.

D.B. splits with Upland

Diamond Bar and Upland split a pair of games Saturday in the Girls Softball Tournament at Ontario's Colony Park.

Upland won the Major Division contest as pitcher Cindy Brownell earned the win and teammate Carol Moser had two hits. Sue Driesbaugh and Carol Hall each doubled and Sue Muse singled twice for the losers.

Diamond Bar ran away with the Minor Division game, 16-2. Doubles by Cindy Beck, Melinda Howder and Debby Moreno led Diamond Bar's 16-hit attack as pitcher Becky Kaiser went all the way to record the win.

The victory was the fourth straight for Diamond Bar's Minor Division team.

RECORD TIME — Stan Vinson of Detroit hits the tape to win the mile relay event at the USA-West Germany-Pan Africa track meet Saturday. The USA team set a world's record in the event with a time of 3:02.42. Two steps behind Vinson is the West German runner.

Records fall at track meet

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Ethiopia's Miruts Yifter, winning both distance races, and America's Mark Wohlhuter, with a fast victory at 800 meters, established themselves as strong Olympic contenders Saturday in the United States-Pan African-West German track meet.

World records were set in both the men's and women's mile relays by American and German teams, but the marks were well short of the comparable metric standards. The four-lap relay is usually run at 1,600 meters in international competition.

In team competition, the American men scored 164½ points to outdistance the Germans with 134 and the African nations with 110½.

The women's competition by the West Germans with 131 to 99 for the United States, and 40 for Pan Africa. The combined score gave the West Germans a narrow 265-263½ victory over the Americans.

The record-setting American relay team was patched together Saturday morning because of an injury to Fred Newhouse. Local collegian Ronnie Ray was recruited for the opening leg and responded with a 46.4 lap.

Robert Taylor kept the team close behind the Germans until Maurice Peoples moved it ahead on the third leg. Stan Vinson anchored in 44.9 seconds to seal the record.

Their time of 3:02.4 bettered the 1966 mark of Trinidad-Tobago by 4-10ths of a second. But it was much slower than the 2:56.1 run by the U.S. Olympic team in 1968 for 1,600 meters, a distance about 12 yards short of a mile.

The same was true of the world mark of 3:30.3 established by the West German women's team of Christiane Krause, Dragmar Fost, Erika Weinstein and Elke Barth. It was well short of the 3:23.0 recorded by East Germany for 1,600 meters in 1972.

Ontario wins in Colt play

Ontario eliminated Claremont, 14-2, in the District I Colt League tournament at Upland Memorial Park Saturday night.

Ontario will now face Chino at 5 p.m. today in the tourney finals. Chino, undefeated in the tournament, needs only a victory in the 5 p.m. contest to claim the championship. If Ontario wins, the two squads will square off again at 8 to decide the title.

Ontario pitcher Mike Breslin scattered six Claremont singles in a game called after six innings on a 12-run rule. If a team has a 12-run lead at the end of the fifth or sixth inning of a Colt League game, that team is declared the winner.

Trailing 2-0, Ontario scored six runs in the fourth inning and eight more in the sixth. Richard Soto hit a basesloaded double for three runs in the fourth, while Eddie Sweet went two-for-two and J.B. Goff had a triple and two singles in three tries.

Ontario was aided by 12 bases on balls and six Claremont errors.

San Dimas, Claremont American and Diamond Bar claimed area championships Saturday in the District 20 Majors Division Little League tournament.

Semifinal pairings will now pit San Dimas against Pomona National (winner of the Area 2 title) Thursday at 6 p.m. and Claremont American against Diamond Bar Friday at 6. Both games will be played at Diamond Bar's field, as will Saturday's championship game.

San Dimas won the Area 1 title with a 5-4 victory over host Glendora South Hills. Pitcher Greg Kuntz went all the way for the win, fanning eight and allowing just one earned run.

Rick Ratliff socked a solo home run and Steve Baca hit a two-run single to highlight San Dimas' five-run third inning. The winners put together all six of their hits as well as two Glendora errors in the inning.

Pitcher Craig Robbins hurled three innings of no-hit, no-run relief for Glendora, while teammate Bubba Batchelber produced all the losers' runs with a pair of two-run homers, giving him three round-trippers in two days.

Pitcher Randy Robertson of Claremont American beat Glendora National for the Area 3 title with sixth-inning relief help from Mark Stevens. Robertson fanned nine batters and Stevens added one strike out in the 7-3 victory.

Diamond Bar pounded out 17 hits and used 14 Pomona Northwest errors to annihilate Northwest, 21-0 in the Area 4 title game. Greg Lynch scattered six hits for the shutout win.

Tommy Davis socked two solo homers and a single for Diamond Bar while Roger Kling went three-for-five and Ted Brewster added a double and single in two tries.

Montclair wins tourney

Jeff Kizziar of Montclair Central pitched a two-hitter Saturday night against Ontario North to give the Montclair squad the championship of the District 23 Senior Division tournament at John Galvin Park.

Montclair scored four times each in the second and fourth innings to earn a 9-3 victory in the nightcap, after Ontario North's 8-6, nine-inning win in the first game forced the second contest.

Kizziar's winning mound effort was supported by a triple and double by Tony Gayler and a double and single by Marty Ogg.

In the first game, Todd Brasel led off the ninth inning with his second double for Ontario and scored the winning run on an error. Leonard Hooks and Steve Penn each contributed a pair of singles for Ontario as pitcher Cesar Munoz got the win in relief.

Montclair Central will advance to the Sub-Sectional tournament at Hacienda Heights next week.

Powell's win does the trick

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Golf Writer

The famous Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio is the next stop for Via Verde C.C.'s head professional, long-hitting Jimmy Powell, who won his third Southern California PGA championship Friday.

Powell qualified for the National PGA tournament by defeating Quail Lake's Denny Meyer one up at Mission Viejo C.C. in the 36-hole final match for the Southland PGA crown.

Powell's win not only qualified him for the National PGA, Aug. 7-10, but gives him exemptions in the Bob Hope Desert Classic, the L.A. Open, the San Diego and Hawaiian opens.

He also pocketed $2,000 for the four-day event, and runnerup Meyer earned $1,500. Another area pro, Chuck Seals of Western Hills, won his first matches and earned $125.

For Powell, the key to his win was his driver. Always known as a long hitter, Powell said Saturday, "I kept my drives almost always in play and had good second shots to the greens."

The veteran pro said he's playing as well as he ever has. "I'm right back to my 1968-69-70 form right now," says Powell, "and that's when I was playing my best."

Powell found the answer to any putting woes he may have had in the past too. "I three-putted only one green on the final day in 36 holes," he said, "and I can't complain about that."

Post 78 loses, 8-7

Baldwin Park scored two runs in the bottom of the eighth inning on a triple, two singles and a walk to defeat Claremont Post 78 Saturday night in American Legion baseball action, 8-7.

Baldwin Park's Mike Keller led off the eighth with a triple, and then scored on Dave Lucas' single. Following a walk, Lucas scored on another single.

In another local legion game played Saturday, Montclair suffered a 13-3 loss to visiting Yucaipa in District 25 action.

Pomona Post 30 edges La Verne

By TIM CLARK
PB Correspondent

Pomona Post 30 pounded Bill Bumstead for six runs in the first inning and then held off a La Verne Post 330 rally in the ninth to overcome the hosts, 7-6, Saturday afternoon at Bonita High.

The Gems simply tore apart Bumstead, the La Verne ace who had entered the contest with a 5-2 record and a 1.89 ERA. After the dust had settled in the top half of the initial frame, Post 30 had racked up six runs on eight hits, and one error.

Pomona came into the ballgame with nothing to lose, having already clinched a spot in the District 18 playoffs with a second place finish in the Western Division to undefeated Arcadia. La Verne, however, had a chance to claim sole possession of first place in the Eastern bracket with a victory.

Post 330 has now fallen into a tie for the top spot with Claremont Post 78. And, possibly, there could be a chance for a three-way tie if La Puente is able to sweep its weekend series with West Covina. But now that there is already a tie between La Verne and Claremont, either a coin flip or a one-game playoff this week will decide the Eastern Division champion.

Keith Glover, the home-run hero of Friday night, got things rolling when he opened the game with a single to center. Glover went all the way to the plate when Post 330's first baseman Ron Pickenpaugh tossed an errent throw into left field in attempting a double-play.

Mike Keegan (who was later to blast his second homer within 24 hours in the fourth), then singled and stole second, and scored on a monstrous triple by Mike Wooten. Wooten scored easily on a shot to center by Joe Chapa.

Chapa scored on a hit-and-run single by Dave Lahar, who later tallied the inning's sixth and last run on Glover's second hit of the frame.

Dean Fritchle, the Gems starter, saw his luck begin to run out in the seventh, and after allowing La Verne to close the score to 7-5, had to give way to Joe Jones, the winner in relief of Friday's game. La Verne tallied for four runs in the seventh, with Bruce McNaught, Bumstead (two), and Dave Drury picking up the RBIs.

La Verne made things a little difficult for Jones in the ninth, as McNaught (.354) opened the final frame with a 400-foot double to left-center. After an out, Bumstead doubled McNaught home to cut the '30 edge to 7-6. Jones settled down however, and finished brilliantly, allowing Drury to ground out, and getting Pickenpaugh to take a called third strike to end the game.

Ted Greene wins B.L. title

Ted Greene took a pair of games from Pomona American A Saturday to win the championship of the Pomona Valley Big League.

The champions won 6-1 and 5-4, making the third game of the best-of-three series unnecessary.

Mark Hope went four-for-four and scored three times to give Ted Greene the win in the first game. The victory went to John Wieman, who scattered six singles.

In the nightcap, Ted Greene scored twice in the bottom of the fifth inning for the comeback win. Singles by Jack Phillips and Randy Babineau and a walk to winning pitcher Mark Soto produced the go-ahead runs.

Brian Cochran went two-for-three for the winners, while Ron Stancyk brought home two runners for Pomona American A with a third-inning squeeze bunt.

Claremont wins tournament title

By BRENT SHYER
PB Correspondent

Claremont clinched the championship in Montclair's Pony League Invitational Tournament for 13-year-olds, with a 6-0 drubbing over Ontario Pinto Saturday night.

In the game played at John F. Kennedy Park, Claremont jumped off to a two-run lead in the first when Mike Clayton walked, stole second and rode home when Jeff Smith hammered a round-tripper over the center field fence. Another pair of runs came across in the third when Clayton walked and went to third on a single by James Hood. Smith then hit a sharp ground ball to third that brought in Clayton. Larry Ryan, who went two-for-three, singled up the middle to score Hood.

In the seventh, Claremont scored its final two tallies on a run-scoring single by Hood, who then reached third on a passed ball and wild pitch and came home on Smith's ground out.

Claremont received excellent pitching by starter Mike Pearson, who gave up only a lead-off single to Joe Vigil in five innings. James Hood who was chosen as the MVP of the tournament, came on to pitch the final two innings and did not allow a hit.

Hood pitched eight hitless innings in the entire tournament, while collecting five hits and recording three saves

"It was a great team and community effort that led the boys to the championship," said J.J. Hood manager of the victorious team.

Hood added, "Larry Ryan, who just took off a cast from a broken leg Monday night, played very well. Also, Jim Magnusson, who was hit on the forehead while pitching last night, came back to watch the game from the dugout after an overnight stay in the hospital. We got great support from the Claremont fans."

Claremont certainly did make it a team effort to win the tournament for the second consecutive year. They are the only city to win the trophy for two straight years.

Next Wednesday, Montclair will be hosting a Pony League tournament for 14-year-olds. Five teams, one each from Claremont, Upland, Chino, Ontario, and host Montclair will be participating in the double elimination affair.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rain forced postponement of Saturday night's Nashville 420 for Grand National cars until 2 p.m. Sunday.

Steady rains throughout Saturday afternoon drenched the asphalt track and race officials said it was too dangerous for racing.

La Verne captures District 20 title

By CRAIG TRAVIS
PB Correspondent

The drought has ended!

Seven years ago the La Verne Senior Division Little League All-Stars won the District 20 baseball title. Since that time, famine for district titles has haunted the local team.

Saturday at Ralph Welch Park, La Verne returned to its winning ways — for what is hoped to be the beginning of seven lean years—as Richard Bustos and Tim Herman teamed up to stop Glendora South Hills, 3-2, for the District 20 title.

For the second straight year Glendora finishes as runnerup.

Coach Yogi Martinez, running the team in the absence of manager Dave Diaz, watched Bustos hurl a no-hitter and Herman drive home the winning run with a scoring fly in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Pete Montero, who raced home with the winning run, opened the final frame by drawing a leadoff walk from losing pitcher Chuck Uhl. Then with the count 2-0 to Eddie Fonseca, the sore-armed Uhl was replaced by Cary Manus, who threw two wide pitches to put runners on first and second.

Montero and Fonseca engineered a double steal of third and second but Bustos (cleanup hitter with nine RBI in the tourney) was walked intentionally on a 3-2 count to load the bases.

Steve Hackett popped up for the first out and Herman followed with a drive to straightaway center field. Outfielder Ken Tillie circled under the ball, made the catch and got off a strong throw toward the plate.

His peg was wide of catcher James Walker to allow Montero to cross the plate with the winning run—and the title.

Glendora South Hills drew first blood with a pair of runs in the fourth inning without the aid of a hit.

Ed Nelson, Ralston team up for Poly

By PHIL ROCHE
P-B Staff Writer

THE CAL POLY Pomona Gridiron Scholarship Day golf event will be held at Via Verde C.C. on Monday, July 28 with Ed Nelson, the Denver Broncos, and Coach John Ralston serving as hosts.

It's a $50 tax deductible donation for the tourney which will be topped by a 7 p.m. banquet. Ed Nelson, television and film star, will serve as master of ceremonies, and the featured speaker will be Ralston, since his Broncos will be in town those days.

Check-in time for the event is 12 noon with a shotgun starting time set for 1 p.m. Awards will be given for low gross, first and second; low net, (handicap and Calloway) first four places, longest drive, closest to the hole. Door prizes will also be given away.

Persons interested can mail their checks to CPPA Broncs, 100 Pomona Mall West, Suite 508, Pomona. Reservations per person for the dinner only is $25.

Whittinghill event

RECOGNIZING the many contributions of Frank Vessels, Dick Whittinghill's annual celebrity-amateur golf tournament has been renamed the Dick Whittinghill-Frank Vessels Invitational for its fifth renewal Aug. 9 at Los Alamitos.

This year's tourney will be played in honor of Vessels, the late owner of both Los Alamitos Golf Course and Los Alamitos Race Track.

"Frank was a major force behind the tournament," explained KMPC morning man Whittinghill. "He donated the use of the course, as well as the awards dinner and night at the races, so that we were able each year to turn over that much more money to the charity.

"His generosity, and his unstinting support of the tournament each year, has made this the most successful one-day charity golf tournament in the country. Last year we raised more than $30,000 in behalf of Resthaven Community Mental Health Center. They will be our official charity again this year, and I felt it appropriate that we should honor Frank in this small way."

Resthaven will benefit from the $200 entry fees paid by the 72 amateurs who will compete with 18 celebrities in this year's tourney, as well as from all $3 gallery tickets sold at the golf course the day of the event.

Gallery tickets, which are also good for admission to the races that night, are also available free at Southern California Datsun dealers.

Meadows gone

WELL, THEY'VE gone and torn up Mountain Meadows Golf Course. The quaint, old course will be closed for a year or so while L.A. County revamps the grounds. Golfers in the area are hoping county people will turn the marvelously located links into a first class course.

I'm not sure though just what kind of clubhouse can be built for $60,000 or $70,000 but that's the amount already appropriated.

Pop Warner tourney

WITH FOOTBALL season just around the corner, the La Verne San Dimas Pop Warner golf tournament set for Saturday, Sept. 20 should draw out many of the valley's sportiest golfers.

First tee-off times are set for 1 p.m. at San Dimas Golf Course, which must rate as one of the best courses in this part of the Southland.

Entry fee for this top-flight tourney is $15, and that includes green fees, carts, and a shot at some flashy prizes. All proceeds go to help defray expenses for the coming Pop Warner season. A banquet to cap the day's activities is also on the agenda.

Persons interested in playing can contact Jack Witham, tourney co-chairman or any La Verne-San Dimas Pop Warner board member.

Green River

GREEN RIVER will hold its popular Member-Member event on Saturday and Sunday. Forty teams will play in the tournament which is best ball for the two days. First tee-off time is 7 a.m.

The club's annual steak fry is Aug. 14.

Two fancy-swinging girls at Green River recorded holes in one recently. Ruth Bower used a driver on the No. 12 and Ruth Ritchery knocked one in on No. 3, Orange Course.

There are now 543 members at Green River.

Money-makers

1. Jack Nicklaus	$180,799
2. Johnny Miller	180,670
3. Hale Irwin	175,627
4. Tom Watson	130,751
5. Tom Weiskopf	129,565
6. John Mahaffey	121,665
7. Al Geiberger	111,742
8. Gene Littler	111,163
9. Bob Murphy	110,927
10. Lee Trevino	104,573

Gary McCord of Riverside has made $24,857 and ranks 65th. Victor Regalado, the young pro who played so often in the Pomona Valley rates No. 93 with earnings of $13,255.

Wondering about Arnold Palmer? He's made $48,402 thus far.

Tour changes

THE TOURNAMENT of Champions moves into a slot immediately after the Masters on the pro golf tour schedule next year.

A partial 1976 schedule has been made available to the touring players showing the once-cancelled Tournament of Champions scheduled in Carlsbad, Calif. April 15-18. The Masters, in Augusta, Ga., is the week before, April 8-11.

In other changes, the Dean Martin-Tucson Open and Phoenix switch dates with Tucson moving into the season-opening slot Jan. 8-11; the Byron Nelson and Colonial National Invitation, in Dallas and Fort Worth, will be played on consecutive weeks, and Jack Nicklaus' new tournament, the Memorial Invitation near Columbus, Ohio, takes over the slot usually held by the Atlanta Classic. Atlanta will host the U.S. Open in 1976 and the Classic will not be played that season.

Martin out

DEAN MARTIN'S three-year association with the Tucson Open Golf Tournament will end after next year, tournament sponsors acknowledged.

At the same time, a member of the Tucson Conquistadores said, the tournament will link its name with the National Broadcasting Co., which televises the event, and use a different celebrity as headliner each year.

Martin's involvement in the 1976 tournament wasn't clear and it is possible he could remain as host next year.

"We have terminated our year-to-year association with Martin," said tournament chairman Dick Gerhart. "What we plan to do is to have a different celebrity host each year."

Since Martin has been affiliated with the tourney, it has grown from $100,000 to $200,000. He has worked as a commentator during broadcasts of the tournament.

Sadaharu in a slump

Oh, who at 35 has enough good years left for a chance to break the world record for career home runs, is working to break out a small slump which has seen his batting average dip to .300 and his home run pace slip to about one every four games.

He also wants to help his Yomuri Giants, the power of Japanese baseball for a decade, climb out of last place, 11 games behind the Central League leader midway through the 130-game season.

"My utmost concern has been, and is, to help our team do better," Oh said. "How can you aim at individual titles when your team needs your contribution?

"I have to admit I'm in an uncomfortable slump like the one I had four years ago, and I'm trying my best to do well."

His mid-July batting average of .300 with 16 home runs and 43 runs batted in puts him behind in his quest to match his 1974 performance of .332, 49 homers and 107 RB. In 1973, he batted .355, hit 55 homers and knocked in 114 runs.

"Some people say I'm still good enough. It may be true, but I'm not satisfied because I know I was better and I can do better with my ability and physical power," Oh said.

It isn't unusual for his batting practice turns to last more than 100 pitches. He once destroyed the straw-mat floor of a Japanese inn while working on his swing on a road trip.

"You have to practice your swing all the time or else you won't be able to swing your bat much faster than the speed of a pitch," he said.

And to break out of a slump, Oh said, "The only thing you can do is practice as hard as a rookie."

Part of Oh's problem is a muscle strain he suffered in his left leg in spring training. Trying to avoid painful movements has somewhat hampered his unusual, but finely balanced batting style, in which he raises his right leg high in the air while preparing to meet a pitch.

"I usually don't advise him," said Shigeo Nagashima, the Giants' manager. But he recently told his star first baseman that his swing and step-in were not coniciding, and his right shoulder was moving up during the swing.

"Considering his ability and experience, he will find a way out of the slump and help us do better," Nagashima said.

Oh has a record contract of $210,000 annually plus $3-3,000 in performance merit pay. That performance includes the Triple Crown in 1973 and 1974 and a career record of a .305 average and 650 home runs as of July 11.

The power-hitting Oh figures he can remain an active player for about another five years and surpass Babe Ruth's long-standing record of 714 career home runs. The next step would be to catch American star Hank Aaron, who broke Ruth's record last year and still is belting home runs.

The two sluggers met in a home run contest in Tokyo last fall. Aaron won by belting 10 home runs of 18 fair balls hit. Oh hit nine homers on 20 fair balls.

Oh said he doesn't think he would enter another similar contest.

"Professional baseball is for a team to win a game," he said, "and individual titles and slugfests are all secondary.

"Furthermore, slugfests are demonstrations which make professional baseball deteriorate into a new kind of show business, which I don't buy."

CATFISH STIFLES As

OAKLAND (AP) — Pitcher Jim "Catfish" Hunter proved to 24,000 Oakland fans that he can also pitch in a uniform other than that of the Oakland Athletics. In his first start against his former teammates, Hunter turned back the As on two singles for a 3-0 victory.

Hunter issued no walks in marking up his third win in his first seven starts as a Yankee. Hunter obtained his release from the As over a contract dispute and last New Year's Eve signed with the Yankees in a deal reported to mean $3.75 million over a number of years.

T-ball teams enter playoffs

Participants were members of the City's two summer leagues. Emerson had a 12 team circuit while Westmont six. Over 270 young boys and girls under nine years of age are playing.

Westmont's champion, the Screaming Eagles (8-2), and Emerson's winner, the Angels (10-1), are the pre-tourney favorites. However, in the past the tournament titlest has not been a league champion.

The event concludes on July 31 at Emerson. The final game will start at 6 P.M. The opening round schedule:

Form World Trade merger, says Butler

We must find a way to form a World Trade merger with Russia, China and Japan and set up an elaborate plan for trading with the new European Common Markets recently endorsed in England.

This was the thrust of a speech, "How World Trade Could Be a Solution to World Peace," given by Mrs. Jessie Haver Butler at the summer luncheon of the Eleanor Roosevelt Democratic Club last week at Orlando's.

Mrs. Butler's suggestion followed her summation of five wars that had taken place in her lifetime, beginning with the Spanish-American War and ending with the war in Vietnam.

Mrs. Butler explained how women are involved in trade as consumers and how they are involved in wars because they give birth to the men and women who get killed in wars.

Before the lecture, Mrs. Kit Tournay, presiding officer, read a bill endorsing the National Health Act of 1975 now before the Congress and sent in by Sen. Edward Kennedy and with Congressman James C. Corman from California backing the bills from the House.

The resolution was unanimously endorsed. It was voted to send copies of the bill to the Democratic Clubs of Southern California and to the leading Democratic authorities in California and the nation.

Indian Hill Blvd., Claremont.

The speaker received a master's degree from UCLA in social work and a master's at USC in Marriage and Family Counciling. His topic will be "You have more potential than you think as a marriage partner."

Russia sold Alaska to the United States on March 30, 1867, for $7.2 million.

Softly

A man's facial skin is as sensitive as a woman's and there is no reason he should bear up under dry, taut, uncomfortable cheeks after shaving. Rather than harsh alcohol-based lotions, a man needs a soothing moisturizer after shaving.

Less gray

A New York hairstlyist darkens strands of gray, four or five hairs at a time to reduce the amount of gray in a hairdo. He says such slight streaking of hair avoid the artificial look of large stripes of color.

Summer fun often includes extra miles of hiking and walking, usually without proper shoes or socks. The results — blisters, callouses and tough dry skin. Clean broken blister areas with an antiseptic and protect from dirt until they heal. Soothe skin and soften callouses with petroleum jelly.

The new mature woman

Health and happiness

By LYNNE ABRAHAM
Center on Mature Women
(Third in series)

Today statistics say a woman of 40 can expect to live to be 78. But although medical world of transplants and sophisticated diagnostic techniques, she has learned that prevention and self-help are most important for her continued well-being.

As women assume more responsibility for their health, they want more information about their bodies. And nowhere is the need to know more evident than among middleaged women confronting menopause.

A roundup of surveys and personal interviews by the Information Center on the Mature Woman indicates that the fear and misunderstanding that has long surrounded this natural physiologic event have not been entirely banished yet.

Literally, menopause means cessation of menstruation. It marks the end of the reproductive years and can occur between the late 30s and mid-50s; the average age for menopause in the United States is 50.

Toward the end of the child-bearing years, the ovaries' production of the hormone estrogen declines, and this may affect other systems of the body, sometimes producing menopausal symptons. Although menopause occurs in every woman who lives long enough, the experience is different for each woman. Some have no complaints. For those who do have hormone-related symptoms—usually hot flashes and sweats—relief may come with estrogen medication prescribed by a physician.

Samplings from a soon-to-be published study by the Boston Women's Health Collective indicate the diverse feelings women have about menopause. The Boston study reinforces findings by sociologist Bernice Neugarten of the University of Chicago, who reports that "Ignorance, not hot flashes, is the problem."

This ignorance, along with society's generally negative attitude toward menopause and aging, provokes anxiety. But worries about this time in a woman's life are not borne out by the experience of most women who've gone through menopause, according to the studies.

"As we value ourselves as more than baby machines," the Health Collective says in the updated edition of its book "Our Bodies, Ourselves," "as we increasingly view middleage as a welcome time offering new freedom to pursue activities that interest us, and as we make careful use of hormones and drugs to minimize the more severe menopausal discomforts, we make it possible for menopause to be a more positive experience."

Preventive care helps insure that the middle years and beyond will be healthy. Twice-yearly checkups are advised for the over-40 woman. Gynecological examinations should include blood pressure, breast, rectal and pelvic checks, and a Pap smear.

Between visits, women should monitor themselves. Dr. Michael J. Daly, chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Temple University in Philadelphia, advises: "Watch your weight. Palpate your breasts, feeling for lumps. Inspect your genitalia for changes, too, and pay attention to discharges."

The new mature woman knows that menopause will not send her into decline, causing her to lose her figure and attractiveness. she keeps herself fit with regular exercise, good diet, stylish wardrobe and contemporary makeup.

Encouraged by the findings of Masters and Johnson and other sex researchers, she knows she can have an active, satisfying sex life. Not only does desire not lessen after menopause, it may increase. Psychologist Joyce Brothers observes that menopause may "release her from pregnancy worries and permit the full flowering of her sexuality."

Horn player plans debute

The prominent German horn player, Hermann Baumann, will give his first performance in Western America at the Claremont Music Festival Friday night. The concert will be in Bridges Hall, Pomona College, at 8:15.

Baumann will be soloist with the festival orchestra, conducted by Giora Bernstein, in his own adaptation of two Handel concertos and in Mozart's Horn Concerto No. 2. The orchestra will also play Respighi's Ancient Airs and Dances, Set 2, and Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

Other festival programs this week include an all-Mozart concert at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the United Church of Christ, Congregational, in Claremont, a free concert in Lyman Hall, Pomona College, at 8:15 Monday night, and a chamber music program in Bridges Hall at the same hour Wednesday.

The chamber music program will be highlighted by the world premiere of Douglas Leedy's "Canti-music," commissioned by the Claremont Music Festival and written for contrabass Bertram Turetzky, festival resident artist.

Also on the program will be Charles Ives' Set for String Quartet, Bass and Piano with violinists Tiberius Klausner and Lori Badessa; violist Arthur Lewis, cellist Peter Rojto, pianist Peter Hewitt, and Turetzky on contrabass. Oboist Richard Woodhams will join Klausner, Lewis and Rejto in Mozart's Quartet in F for Oboe and Strings.

The concert will also feature Encounters IV for Oboe and Piano, by Pomona College music professor Karl Kohn, performed by Woodhams and Hewitt.

Tickets to all the concerts are on sale at Pomona College and at Mutual agencies.

Routine fire, then surprise

TORRANCE (AP) — Firemen thought it was a routine fire and rescue—until someone found the dynamite.

The bomb squad was called to haul out a quantity of the explosive Thursday after firemen extinguished a house fire and rescued a 29-year-old man who suffered burns over 85 per cent of his body and was listed in critical condition.

SHOPPERS AT THE MAY CO. in the Montclair Plaza were surprised and delighted on a recent afternoon to come upon a small group of young musicians presenting a mini-concert of classical music between the dress racks and the book department. These were representatives of the Claremont Music Festival which May Co. has "adopted." Myrna Samuel, general manager, was hostess at a luncheon for conductor Giora Bernstein and the musicians. They repaid the invitation by presenting a delightful program for the shoppers.

Fireworks ban sought in state

LOS ANGELES (AP)— The city Board of Fire Commissioners has agreed to press for state legislation banning all fireworks statewide or at least in Los Angeles County.

City Attorney Burt Pines has proposed the ban because he said a 1942 ordinance outlawing fireworks within city limits cannot be enforced because many areas surrounding the city have no such restriction and fireworks are readily available.

"At least if the ban fails statewide, we hope to get a county ban," a spokesman for Pines said

Goldwyn Studio rebuilt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Samuel Goldwyn Studios has been rebuilt on the ashes of the disastrous fire that swept the building May 6, 1974.

Amid ceremonies with the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, two new sound stages were recently dedicated. Studio manager Jack Foreman termed them "the most modern film and tape production facilities in the world today."

The fire destroyed three stages and damaged offices of the historic studio. The new stages occupy the same space, providing 23,000 square feet of production space. The first show to be made there is "Far Out Space Nuts," starring Bob Denver and Chuck McCann. It is produced by Sid and Marty Krofft. The 1974 fire began during the making of a show produced by the Krofts.

Ben Franklin said, "You may delay, but time will not."

'A delightfully funny minstrel show'

By MAE TATE

Robert Guillaume as Rev. Purlie Victorious Judson is charming and unrelenting in his purpose of righting racial wrongs. He brings both strength and realness to his role as the Southern black preacher with a dream, alternating between the sing-song rhythm speech patterns of the pulpit and the serious, resonant tone of every day talk.

He announces his purpose early: "The South is split in two like a fat man's underwear. And somebody is going to have to do something about it besides the Supreme Court."

And what he does sparks laughter and joy at the folly and fun of it all.

Patti Jo as Lutiebelle Gussie Mae Jenkins is a refreshing new talent, reminiscent of Melba Moore who created and won acclaim for the role in the original New York production. Her naive whine and adoration of Rev. Purlie is corny, but not irritating. She delivers "I Got Love" with a strong voice and bright eyes.

Norma Donaldson (Missy) gives strong backup up to the stars. Her speech is natural and unpretentious and her singing voice is rich and full with Purlie's "Down Home" and Lutiebelle's "He Can Do It."

Barry Smith as Gitlow, "deputy in charge of the coloreds," is good but slightly miscast. He's more like Harry Belafonte than a southern Uncle Tom. His strongest moment is "Easy Goin' Man."

"Purlie" opens with familiar gospel harmony of black folk. Twenty-two voices rejoice and raise like a hundred strong. The audience is thrown immediately into the fury of a talented cast. Although the music slows down, the lines remain powerful and convincing.

The sets are realistic and simple. Even the shack is typically Southern, right down to the newspapers glued here and there, sadly passing for wallpaper.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — A large fresco that experts believe is by Bernardino Luini, one of Leonardo da Vinci's favorite pupils, has come to light in St. Mark's Church.

The fresco portrays the Virgin Mary with the Holy Child and St. John the Baptist. It was concealed beneath a 17th century portrait of St. Barbara.

'Notes' warning given

The California Department of Real Estate has warned investors to be wary of persons or companies offering "high yield" promissory notes secured by unimproved subdivided parcels.

Such promissory notes, real property securities, may not be legally offered to California citizens unless the seller first obtains a permit from the department. Otherwise, such an activity can be a felony, said officials.

Persons approached to buy one of a series of such contracts or notes should identify the seller and ask to see the security permit. If a permit isn't produced, the prospective purchaser should notify the nearest office of the real estate department.

The department is alerting citizens to the potential danger of buying high yield notes because of a widely publicized Florida land case in which investigators say some 30,000 investors in several states in the last few years have been victimized by buying such notes which are now found to be backed by virtually worthless land and which were sold without state registration.

Similar operations in California have been rare since the permit requirements were enacted in 1961, said officials.

Bs ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Remember when you could buy a piece of land and build a house on it with no important decision except the kind of design you wanted?

Remember when you could buy a piece of land and be almost certain that it would appreciate in value over a period of years?

Today, when you purchase land for a future house, you have to check carefully into numerous factors intertwined with the times — escalating taxes, increasingly severe zoning restrictions, ecological laws, rising construction costs, mortgage difficulties and high interest rates, to name just some of them.

When you purchase land for investment purposes, you'd better be very sure that the pathway to promised profits isn't strewn with pitfalls that will make the property difficult to sell in the future, let alone make money on the transaction.

But, can you find a good site for your house? Can you buy land that is likely to increase in value? You are more likely to find the first than the second. As A.M. Watkins points out in his new book, "Buying Land," investing in property "will be far more perilous in the future than at any time in the past."

Every possible tip and consideration get the once-over from Watkins in his discussion of the quest for land. No. 1 on the list in the purchase of land for investment is the necessity to diversify, not to put all your eggs in one basket. "Spread your money around on two or three different pieces of land, and, if possible, land in different places not too much alike, so the success of each investment will not hinge on the same fortuitous circumstances all coming together at the same time," the author says.

Purchases should always be made in the area of growth, so that in time the construction catches up with the holdings. This is seen as the principal reason for the successful buying of land for investment. But two other factors are not overlooked. One is plain luck. The other is a kind of intuition that some persons — not too many — have for sensing valuable land in the making.

The Crucial Importance of Timing, How To Shop for Land, Buying Lots from a Land Development Company and Common Growth Patterns are only a few of the many chapter headings in the Watkins book.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Reform issue

Redevelopment curbs sought

Assemblyman Joseph B. Montoya, D-60th Dist., has introduced two measures designed to curb the abuses of community redevelopment agencies and to increase low and moderate income housing.

"Community redevelopment is an area of the law that is little understood by the people of California until its begins to encroach on their homes and business. By then it is too late, said Montoya of La Puente.

"While a majority of the redevelopment in the state may be beneficial, so many problems have developed in some redevelopment areas that the whole subject demands legislative examination."

The Community Redevelopment Act was originally enacted as a method for local governments to remove blight and provide low and moderate income housing for their communities.

Under present law, the local government can create a redevelopment agency with the authority to buy and sell land, including by eminant domain. The Community Redevelopment Agency, once established, may become a state agency that is no longer subject to local controls, he explained.

— Too broad a definition of "blight". One part of the definition of blight is under-utilization of land. This has led to some instances of declaring prime land as blighted. One city is attempting to declare a golf course as a blighted area.

— Abuses of tax increment funding. When a city creates a project area, the tax base for all taxing agencies can be frozen and the revenue from rising assessed valuation is channeled instead to the redevelopment agency.

"This creates a number of problems," Montoya said. "For instance, there is no factor to adjust for inflation. This means that other agencies using the area as a tax base while receiving the same dollars gets less value over the years."

Los Angeles County, with 43 redevelopment agencies, reports that in 1974-75, the agencies drained off $30.6 million in property tax revenue, of which $10.5 million would have gone to the county.

— Lack or coordination between projects. Since any city can start a redevelopment project, the projects of neighboring cities are often in conflict or even competition with each other. "In Los Angeles County, where there are 79 incorporated cities, the competition is especially intense among some cities to create shopping centers. Unfortunately there are not enough people to support the proliferation of shopping centers," Montoya said.

— Not enough low and middle income housing being developed. "Community redevelopment has become a process for commercial development at the expense of the communities," Montoya said.

— Lack of community control. "We have had complaints from all over the state because of the abuses of redevelopment agencies," Montoya said. As an example, Montoya cited the City of Rosemead, in his own 60th Assembly District, where two city council members were recalled during a redevelopment controversy.

"Even the recall could not stop the redevelopment process. Instead, the remaining city council members appointed one of the recalled councilmen to a spot on the redevelopment agency. It took an additional recall election to stop the redevelopment project," Montoya said.

The first Montoya bill would make the local legislative body the redevelopment agency. Currently the cities may be the agency or may appoint an agency. Once the agency is appointed it is not subject to recall or referendum.

"Making the legislative body the redevelopment agency would put redevelopment in the hands of elected officials who should be more responsive to their constituents."

The second measure would give the Department of Housing and Community Development supervisory authority over redevelopment agencies and require 25 percent of redevelopment monies to go to low and moderate income housing. It would also create a fiscal review committee consisting of all the effected taxing agencies in a project area to approve the fiscal aspects of the project.

Homes have emerged as security blankets

SAN FRANCISCO — (BW) — The single-family home, with its dramatic economic appreciation and its increasing emotional appeal, has emerged as the "security blanket of the seventies," Dr. Joyce Brothers told the closing session of the 17th annual Pacific Coast Builders Conference.

Commenting that a "happy home" has become the most desired goal in America according to recent surveys, Dr. Brothers, a noted consultant, columnist and psychologist, said:

"Americans are placing increasing importance on their homes today — be they mansions or lofts — as financial and lifestyle investments."

Pointing out that this trend is likely to continue strong in the years ahead, Dr. Brothers revealed that by 1980 the 25-to 34-year-old age group will receive 26 per cent of all pre-tax income and there will be 49 per cent more workers in that age group than there were in 1970.

She added that during the past five years investment in a sound home in a stable neighborhood produced a better return than any alternative investment a family could have made during that period, exclaiming that in just four years the value of homes has appreciated by 5 per cent or more.

Dr. Brothers told the builders that in order to provide homes that will appeal to the 25-to 34-year-old age group they must understand the attitudes of these customers.

"These are members of the so-called 'jeans generation' which first reflected its attitudes in its clothing. Now these young people want their homes to reflect their attitudes and personalities."

As an example of shifting attitudes in society, Dr. Brothers said, "Young executives, no longer harnessed to the puritan work ethic, are saying, 'My family and home life come first, not the company.'"

Among other trends that will influence home styles in the future, according to Dr. Brothers, are the increase in the number of single-person households as people marry later, a declining birth rate and the increase in the number of working wives.

"All this means the homebuilding industry will be catering to a much broader range of individual desires and that its product will, likewise, need to be more varied," Dr. Brothers said.

Dr. Brothers also made a strong case for builders to concentrate on consumerism. She said in a survey conducted this past year more than 90 per cent of the respondents continued to support consumerism. She condemned the homebuilders for their institution of homeowners warranty programs.

Police chief: I deserved salary cut, reprimand

CARLSBAD (AP) — Chief of Police Roy J. Kundtz admits he overturned a patrol car driving home. He reported it promptly, and promptly was docked in pay and got a chewing-out.

City Manager Paul Bussey said he will reduce the chief's $2,095 monthly salary by 7 per cent for three months.

"The action taken by the city manager was fair and justifiable," said Kundtz, whose cruiser suffered $1,200 damage when it overturned at a sharp curve late Tuesday night.

Bright future expected in use of solar energy

The National Association of Realtors has learned from spokesmen of leading firms in the solar energy field that the nation verges on major breakthroughs for substantially improving the cost and efficiency of solar equipment.

"This could occur within the next two years but certainly would be seen within five years," said S. H. Butt, president of the Solar Energy Industries Association.

Assuming the alternative energy source as electricity, these breakthroughs would result in the solar energy system's paying for itself in seven years or less," he added. "It's at the cost-efficiency point that solar energy will come into widespread use."

Equipment cost might drop to about $4,500 on a 2,000 square foot home from the present $5,000 to $6,000 level. And improved technology will mean greater efficiency in solar heating and air conditioning, cutting back on the cost per BTU unit produced and increasing the saving over conventional methods.

Butt reported that 600 persons, including 35 exhibitors, took part in a recent International Solar Industry Expo 1975 in Washington, D. C. Those attending expressed hope for a bright future for the industry as natural gas, oil and electricity costs continue to rise.

"An indication of the strength of the industry can be seen in its rapid growth. The Federal Energy Administration noted early this year that 39 firms manufactured solar energy equipment in 1974. Our best estimate is that there now are 50 to 60 firms in the field, although about two-thirds of them are small firms," he said.

Butt and two other industry spokesmen, Ray Gallagher of PPG Industries and Ronald Peterson of Grumman Aerospace Corp., pointed to several factors that could increase competition, speed cost reduction and improve equipment efficiency:

—The Solar Heating and Cooling Demonstration Act of 1974. Subsidies will be provided to solar energy teams — for example, builder, financier and solar equipment supplier — beginning in July for several thousand commercial and residential solar projects. The object of the legislation is to spur interest of builders in solar energy, demonstrate working systems throughout the nation and develop more efficient equipment.

—Increased recognition by state legislatures that solar energy is a viable alternative to current energy sources. In Indiana, for example, the legislature has exempted solar equipment from property and sales taxes. It also has reduced the assessed value of homes with solar equipment by $2,000.

—The pending tax credit-tax deduction measure. The bill, which was approved in the House and now awaits Senate action and President Ford's signature, would provide a tax credit or tax deduction for installation of solar equipment on new or existing homes. The maximum credit would be $2,000 and the top deduction from gross income would be $4,000.

Meanwhile, however, other decisions will be made by industry that would improve competition in the field, both from a cost and efficiency basis.

For example, Grumman will decide within the next month whether to market a solar hot water heater. there are other firms, manufacturing such heaters, but Grumman feels theirs would be competitive, "selling for about $700, plus installation cost.

"Estimates are that a hot water heater accounts for about 30 per cent of a home's total fuel bill, and that our solar heater could save from 50 per cent to 70 per cent of normal hot water costs," Peterson explained.

However, Butt noted other factors, primarily at the local level, that stand in the way of rapid progress for the industry:

—Important questions still need to be answered. Is there a right to the sun? Does the owner of a home heated by solar energy have any recourse against a neighbor who builds a structure that blocks his sunlight?

—There is a need to alter zoning regulations in many areas to encourage maximum use of solar energy.

—Building codes in many areas indirectly prohibit use of solar equipment for heating and air conditioning.

—Lending institutions need to be persuaded to make long-term mortgage loans on new solar homes, and to finance installation of solar equipment on existing homes.

Butt feels that this "education process" for lenders, public officials and the consumer will be far enough along in five years that solar heating and air conditioning will be generally permissible and available across the nation.

Thus, combined with technological advances to make solar equipment more efficient and growing competition and other factors to make it less costly, the Age of the Sun could begin by or before 1980, he added.

Fairway has its opening

The homes are adjacent to the fairways at Ontario National Golf Course. Sixty units were constructed in the first phase and 98 units in the second phase.

"Just as in phase one and two, we will offer potential residents quality built three and four bedroom homes, priced from $29,600 to $36,750," said Richard H. Hahn, president of Kingsway Construction Corp.

All Fairway homes include two bathrooms, wall-to-wall shag carpeting, fireplaces, ceiling-high closets, ash cabinets and underground utilities. Buyers have a choice of five floor plans.

"The spectacular popularity of the first two phases has generated much pre-opening interest in phase three," said Hahn. "Phase one is sold out and there are a few model homes still available in the second phase," he added.

Persons may reach the development by taking the Pomona Freeway to the Vineyard Avenue offramp, go south to Walnut Avenue and then to 1911 Bermuda Dunes court.

The three and four bedroom homes range in price from $32,250 to $36,300. Nearly half of the first phase was sold in the first 10 days, said officials.

They also feature underground utilities, front lawns, telephone outlets in each room, dishwashers, wall-to-wall carpeting, ceramic tile, built-in ranges and ovens and smoke detectors.

Buyers are offered FHA and VA financing at 8 per cent interest rates, with no down payments required for VA loans. Also available are conventional and Cal Vet financing.

The homes will be ready for occupancy next September.

Orange Show is improved

Five improvement projects costing $138,491 are underway or have been completed on the National Orange Show grounds in San Bernardino.

These include a new shop building, an eight sided structure of futuristic design to blend with the nearby Dome building; a loop water system; fire sprinklers along the interior sides of the Citrus Feature Exhibit Building, the hobby building and stage area of Swing Auditorium; emergency lighting units in all buildings; and "panic" hardware on doors in the restaurant and art gallery.

AGOURA (AP) — Witnesses had little trouble describing the gunman who robbed a Bank of America branch here of nearly $7,000.

Despite nearly 100-degree temperatures, the gunman, — armed with a silver plated revolver — was clad in a silver ski jacket, blue cap and pants, ski boots and silver mirrored sunglasses. Even his full beard was tinged with silver, witnesses said.

This offering of "As is" family residences is restricted to prospective homeowner-occupants. All offers must be submitted on the "Offer to Purchase & Brokers Tender" (Form 9551). The following certification MUST be written on the back of the Offer to Purchase (Form 9551) and signed by purchasers: "I certify that I am purchasing this property as a homeowner-occupant." FAILURE TO FOLLOW THESE INSTRUCTIONS WILL DISQUALIFY BID. Properties not sold to Homeowner-occupants will be relisted at a later date for sale to any buyer.

IMPORTANT INSTRUCTIONS: READ CAREFULLY

Deposit of $500.00 on all properties upon acceptance of offer. Damages for failure of performance would be extremely difficult to determine in the event buyer fails to comply with all terms of the accepted offer. It is for this reason mutually understood and agreed that HUD shall retain the successful bidders deposit as liquidated damages and as HUD's sole remedy against buyer. However, if the sale is rejected by HUD, the deposit will be refunded. BIDS MUST BE SEALED AND THE DATE, TIME OF BID OPENING AND ADDRESS OF PROPERTY MUST BE PLACED ON THE ENVELOPE. BID FORM (9551) MUST SHOW ADDRESS BY HOUSE NUMBER, STREET, CITY AND ZIP CODE. HUD reserves the right to withdraw or reject any or all offers at its descretion prior to the close of escrow. All sales of "As is" properties must close within 30 days from date of bid and cannot be conditioned upon future financing availability, including V.A. Time is of the essence. No discount points or origination fees will be paid on all cash sales. After purchase no one is to enter the property for purpose of repairs or rehabilitation until escrow is closed and deed is recorded. HUD does not warrant habitability of premises or compliance with local building codes. The contract of sale on the following homes will contain a statement to the express effect that the property may not meet local or state building or housing codes; that HUD assumes no responsibility for compliance in connection with the sale. The appropriate local building department will be notified of the sale and the condition of the property. The contract of sale shall note any known deficiences or code violations found to exist at the time of sale closing. All additions, changes and conditions noted on the contract of sale will be acknowledged by the signature of the buyer(s).

HUD will assure that the requirements of the Lead Base Paint Act will be met prior to closing. Such action will be a contingency of the sale and may alter the appearance or physical condition of the property subsequent to this listing for sale.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — When frying meats, first wash, salt and then drop the pieces in a brown paper bag that contains some flour. Shake till each piece is coated and shake off excess flour. Throw away the bag and there is no mess to clean up. — HELEN.

POLLY'S NOTE: (To prepare chicken for frying, I put the salt and pepper in the bag too, and shake before adding the chicken. I save the remaining seasoned flour for thickening the gravy.)

DEAR POLLY — I found a good use for those circle teething rings my toddler no longer needs. I tie these rings to the ends of pull-toy cords and my child can pull them without the strings constantly slipping through his hands. — LINDA.

DEAR POLLY — Put soiled household sponges in a net bag or pillowcase and throw it in your washer to get them clean, with no rubbing and scrubbing. — MARGARET.

DEAR POLLY — To keep a pastry brush handy in the shortening can, make two cuts, side-by-side, about ¼-inch apart and 1-inch-long through the edge of the plastic lid. This little flaplike door lets me keep the brush in the can and still keep the lid on. — ANDY.

DEAR POLLY — I use towelettes premoistened with baby oil when changing my baby. Since a whole towelette is not needed, I cut each in half when I buy a new box. The baby oil I get on my hand is rubbed in to soften them — SHIRLEY.

DEAR POLLY — A bridge club friend who never forgets a birthday told me her secret: The first of each month she prepares cards for mailing for each birthday in the month. She notes the dates in stamp area of each envelope and stacks them, in order, on a table near the door, ready to stamp and mail. — JEAN.

DEAR POLLY — Do-it-yourselfers who wear glasses with wire-type frames can cut pieces of plastic-clad wire the length of the temples, slide the wire out of the plastic and use these tubes over their frames. Easy on the ears! — MRS. F.Z.

DEAR POLLY — When my Mom makes slacks or shorts, she uses the waistbands from old panty hose. The waists are the right size in no time at all. — ANITA.

DEAR POLLY — After removing meat from the broiler pan and while it is still hot, I cover the grille part of the pan with wet paper towels. By the time I'm ready to wash dishes the grille will wash clean easily. — H.F.H.

POMONA VALLEY COMMUNITY HOSPITAL

PVCH now most modern in state

A newly completed $8.5 million addition to Pomona Valley Community Hospital will be open for public inspection on July 27 from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

Located at the eastern side of the hospital, 1798 N. Garey Ave., in Pomona, the four-story addition contains critical care, emergency, physical therapy, radiology, auditorium, classrooms, and purchasing departments.

Construction was begun in 1972 with Harnish, Morgan and Causey of Ontario as architects. Director of engineering at PVCH is Robert L. Peterson.

Members of the hospital staff and their families are being offered the first view of the center this afternoon. On Thursday evening, board members, medical staff members, city officials and other invited guests will be guided through the wing.

Representatives of hospital organizations and health groups will join the public for the July 27 tour.

Since opening its doors at the present location in 1913, Pomona Valley Community Hospital has undergone many renovations plus four major additions.

In 1928, a four-story wing was added to the original structure as the result of a $50,000 grant from Russell Pitzer.

A $1 million four-story and basement unit was added in 1956 to provide additional space for surgery, obstetrics, nursery, laboratory and physical therapy departments.

In 1963, the six-story east wing was completed for the x-ray department, medical records and more physical therapy.

Parking was expanded in 1965 with the purchase of 25 lots north of the hospital.

The hospital is licensed for 332 beds at present. With the new addition completely open in September, there will be 389 beds available.

Stillinger Interiors has attempted to eliminate the institutional look of a hospital through the use of 41 different floor materials, including 16 various carpets and eight ceramic tiles.

On corridor walls outside the auditorium, a three-dimensional effect has been created using wall vinyls in warm and cool colors.

The 375-seat auditorium has been named in honor of Russell K. Pitzer, a longtime benefactor of the hospital and the community.

With the opening of the new emergency service department, the hospital now has the largest emergency facility in Los Angeles County other than Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center.

Modern emergency room

Opening of the ultra modern emergency center in the new addition will give Pomona Valley residents the largest and most fully equipped, 24-hour emergency medical center in Southern California with the exception of USC Los Angeles County-Medical Center.

Size of the center has been increased by 400 per cent and meets all requirements as a regional major trauma center.

The hospital was the first non-university hospital to have doctors whose practice was, and is, limited to the specialty of emergency medicine. At present there are six physicians who devote their total practice time to the emergency room to provide comprehensive as well as emergency treatment to approximately 40,000 patients a year.

Included in the new emergency center is a trauma area fully equipped with 12 beds and emergency crash cart where patients are evaluated and therapy is begun immediately at the discretion of the physician. A holding area of seven beds fully monitored is for patients under observation, or waiting to be admitted to the hospital.

In addition there are six specially equipped examination and treatment rooms including eye, ear, nose, and throat; minor surgery; gynecology; pediatrics; lavage and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation.

A cast and x-ray room plus a waiting room functionally designed for adults and children complete the emergency center complex. Parking for patients has been provided for at the center.

PVCH EMERGENCY ROOM CREW IN ACTION

PVCH honors Pitzer

A fitting tribute was bestowed upon Russell Kelly Pitzer when PVCH board committee voted to name the new 365-seat auditorium in his honor.

Pitzer Auditorium will host conferences, symposiums and discussions of every type, many already planned.

Nothing could be more appropriate for Pitzer than to be associated with the educational advancement of all sectors of the hospital community.

Education was a special interest of Mr. and Mrs. Pitzer and his name will be associated with the meeting of minds in the medical field.

On the level below the wood-panelled, audio-visual equipped Pitzer Auditorium is the education area of the hospital. Ten new classrooms now are available for registered nurse, licensed vocational nurse, nurse aides and radiology students from Mt. San Antonio College, Fullerton Junior College, Citrus College and Pomona Unified School District.

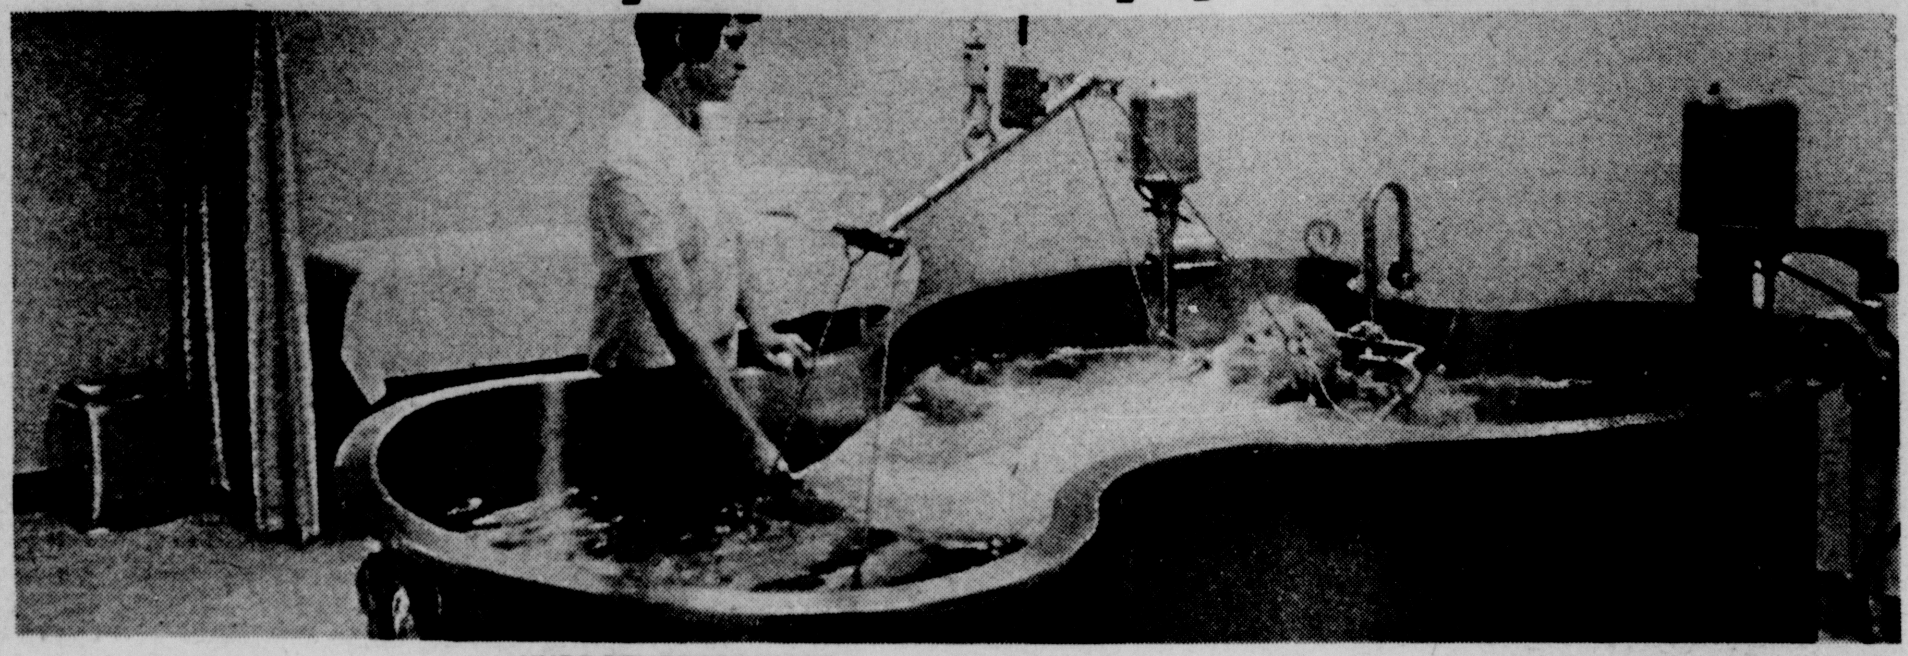
PVCH's unique therapy department



HYDROTHERAPY TANK

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

After gaining national recognition for his published works on designing physical therapy departments, Charles M. Magistro has produced one of the most functional and attractive physical therapy departments in the West with the completion of the new department at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

The PT department occupies 8,000 square feet on the first floor of the new $8.5 million addition to the hospital. It is located conveniently for both outpatients and inpatients and is adjacent to adequate parking.

Since these special tanks are used to treat burn patients as well as orthopaedic patients, a unique filtered forced air system, the first of its kind in the nation, has been incorporated into the room design.

This air system reduces the normal reaction of chilling and pain experienced by burn patients when they are removed from the warm water. Warm, filtered air is forced through a series of ceiling panels down onto the patient. Both force of the air and its temperature can be controlled by therapists.

The department has 11 individual treatment rooms where patients can undergo therapy procedures. Each room is

In one major staff area, many monitoring devices have been installed. Several of these were designed by Magistro and constructed by the hospital's staff. Eight television sets on one bank guarantee complete monitoring of the department at all times.

Large panels, located in the staff center and office, are lighted with green and red lights to indicate which treatment rooms are occupied and if the patient wishes attention. Electrically operated timers and other devices assist with the monitoring of the department.

Magistro has been head of the PT department at Pomona Valley Community Hospital for 22 years. He is president of the American Physical Therapy association.

He has written a chapter on department planning, design and construction in the book, "Physical Therapy Administration and Management," by Robert J. Hickok.

Linear accelerator

The radiology department of PVCH took a major step forward in March when the basement section of the critical care center was complete enough to allow installation of a linear accelerator.

The linear accelerator provides x-rays of 6-million electron volt energy to concentrate high doses of radiation in small areas. The room is especially built and designed to host this $200,000 version of the giant atom smashers used in research at Stanford University, Palo Alto.

Drug therapy, surgery and radiation therapy are used singly or in combination to destroy or inhibit cancer in growing numbers of cancer patients.

In 1973, an average of nine cancer patients were treated on a daily basis. Today, an average of 25 patients per day utilize benefits of the linear accelerator. Cancer patients do not need to travel long distances any longer for complex, consistent radiation therapy treatments.

ACCELERATOR SIMILAR TO ATOM SMASHER

Respiratory center

An increase from 2,000 patient procedures in 1965 at PVCH to 76,000 in 1974 indicates the tremendous growth of the cardio-respiratory department in less than a decade.

Reason for accelerated growth is the epidemic proportions of chronic obstructive lung diseases in this country and the hospital's concern for providing the needed respiratory treatments to rehabilitate chronic respiratory patients through exercise and treatment programs.

Respiratory services range from treatment of hyaline membrane disease in newborn infants to emphysema, bronchitis, acute asthma and acute respiratory failure in adults. Arterial blood gas studies also are performed in the department's diagnostic laboratory.

The department also includes electrocardiogram service plus sophisticated cardiac-stress-testing and cardiac monitoring instrumentation. Therapists are trained to be an integral part of the hospital's resuscitation team.

Critical care unit

Both upper levels of the new addition house the coronary care and intensive care units as well as 85 medical surgical beds.

Latest in electronic monitoring equipment is available to every patient in the ICU and CCU sections. In addition, physiological electronic monitoring equipment and nursing stations in the shape of a horseshoe allow each nurse to view medical or surgical patients who require constant observation.

Each room is equipped with sliding glass doors, has all necessities within the reach and is constructed to allow a maximum of sun, light and air. The coronary care unit now is able to accommodate 16 instead of the previous eight patients. Also nearly doubled in size is the post-coronary care unit with 23 beds instead of the previous 14 bed capacity.

The third floor of the critical care center features a rehabilitative atmosphere provided by the decorating of Charles Stillinger. There is an increase of 21 beds on this medical-surgical floor in addition to unique nursing stations designed for ultimate efficiency. Contained here are 33 semi-private rooms, 16 private rooms and three isolation rooms for a total of 85 beds available to the medical-surgical patient.

CENTRAL STERILIZATION AREA

A totally new center which combines central service, purchasing and receiving into one, occupies 5½ times the space of the former departments. It is located in the basement of the new addition.

Flow of all materials from the time they arrive at the hospital's separate recessed entrance dock away from the regular vehicular traffic, to the time they are delivered to a specific department, is under direction of the materials department.

Sterilization and cleaning of all medical equipment used in the hospital is done here. Rounding out the complex is the mail room which processes all incoming and outgoing mail as well as delivery service.

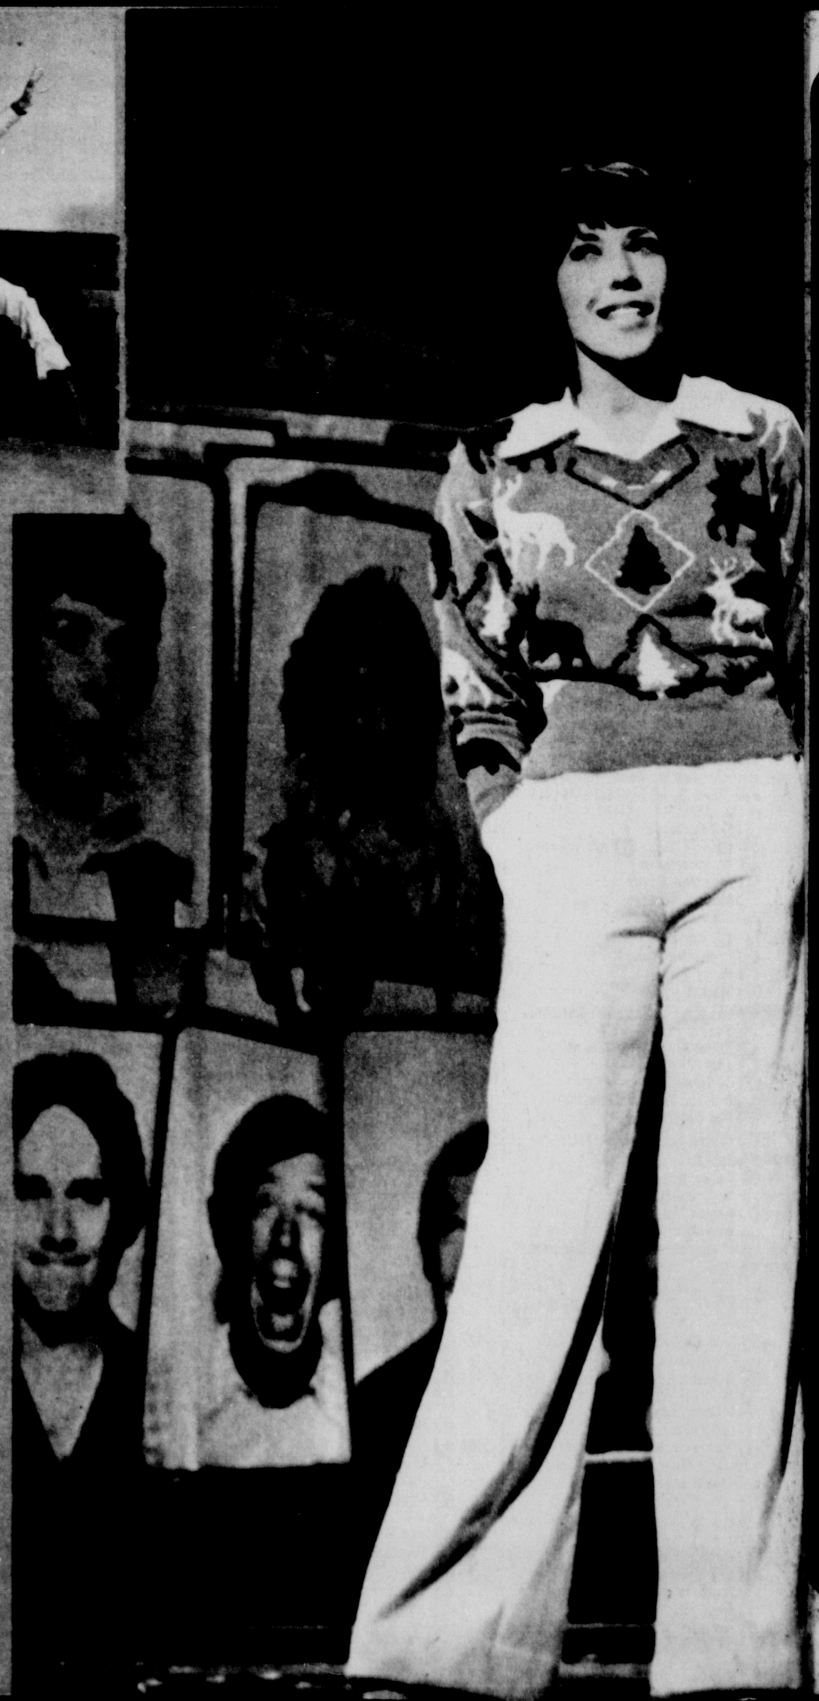
SUMMER COMEDY

Keep on Truckin' is a new variety hour of music and fast-paced contemporary comedy, on ABC, Saturdays at 8PM. Underscored by the musical beat of the 70s, the stock company of resident zanies, impressionists, stunt people, singers and dancers are made up of (pictured left to right) Charles Fleischer, Didi Conn, Gailard Sartain, Rhonda Bates and Larry Ragland; (not pictured) Jack Riley, Fred Travalena, Marion Ramsey, Kathrine Baumann, Franklyn Ajaye, Wayland Flowers, Jeannine Burnier, Rhilo Fahir, and Richard Lee Sung. Each week the group takes a humorous look at TV, movies and social behavior.



'COMEDY WITH LILY'

Lily Tomlin plays a bored housewife who takes a job as a store detective and finds herself fending off passes from an amorous boss, portrayed by guest star John Byner, in "The Lily Tomlin Show," comedy-variety special airing Friday at 10PM on ABC. As consumer expert Judith Beasley, Lily opens the hour with a demonstration of the enduring quality of "Stay-put" by going through a car wash sans car. She comes out water-logged but with her hair intact, then gives a musical salute to Detroit, her hometown.

In other highlights, Lily shows what happens when a conservative couple in Dull City become parents of a baby clown (Lily) and as the advanced-for-her-years Edith Ann, she reads one of her classic stories. As Bobbi Jeanine, entertainer in the Starlight Lounge, in a change of pace, the inventive performer combines a touch of bittersweet and comedy with the help of Byner and Doris Roberts. Appearing with Lily on her special program, in addition to Byner and Roberts, are Betty Beaird, Valri Bromfield, Christopher Guest, Richard Tomlin (her brother), Gary Weis and Bill Zuckert.

'PACKERS RECALL LOMBARDI WITH AFFECTION AND AWE'

If ever a man was a legend in his own time, that man was Vince Lombardi, coach of the Green Bay Packers football team during their glory years and later, coach of the Washington Redskins. The legend grew after Lombardi's death several years ago, as illustrated by last year's TV special about Lombardi's career, with Ernest Borgnine portraying him.

Now fans will have a chance to hear Lombardi recalled by some of the players whom he led to five NFL championships between 1961 and 1967. Paul Hornung, Jim Taylor and Max McGee discuss Lombardi with affection still mixed with a touch of awe on the repeat of The Way It Was Thursday at 7:30PM on KCET.

The three stars of the Packs' golden era are present in the KCET studios to participate in a recap of the 1960 NFL title game with the Philadelphia Eagles. Representing the Eagles on the special are the legendary quarterback, Norm Van Brocklin; his favorite pass receiver, Tommy McDonald, and lineman Chuck Bednarik, the last man to play both offense and defense in pro football.

The Way It Was presents encores of some of the greatest moments in American sports history. As film highligts show all the action and thrills of each event covered, the players recall their thoughts and emotions on the field of battle under the questioning of sportscaster Curt Gowdy, as series host.

It's McGee, who doubled as the Packers' leading pass receiver and punter, who comes up with the most incisive recollection of Lombardi. To set the scene, films show the Packers, losing 13-6 in the third quarter with fourth down and 10 yards to go on their own 20-yard line. McGee goes back to kick but instead of punting, he tucks the ball under his arm and races to the Eagles' 45. "And what was Lombardi's reaction to that?" asks Gowdy.

"Well," answers McGee, "I used to love to run on fourth down like that. But when Lombardi took over as our coach, he told me, 'You'll never do that while I'm the coach.' That's why I was afraid to go back to our bench after that run." When he finally returned to the bench, McGee says, he stood as far away from Lombardi as possible. "The coach wouldn't look at me," he adds. "But after the game, as all great coaches do, he told a reporter, 'Well, we always let some of our veterans do whatever they want to do on fourth down.'"

Hornung, who had been injured earlier in the game when he was tackled viciously by the Eagles' Bednarik, contributed a slightly different memory of Lombardi on that play. "I was standing next to him on the sideline," recalls Hornung. "When Max took off and ran, instead of kicking, Lombardi screamed, 'What the hell are you doing, McGee?' But when McGee made it all the way to the Eagles' 45, Lombardi yelled, 'That's the way to go, Max!'"

McGee wrapped up his memories of Lombardi when Gowdy asked, "Was he really as tough as they said he was?" "All I can tell you," answered McGee, "was that he got back half of everything he ever paid me—in fines."

'VOICES OF EXPERIENCE'

Like most Hollywood sets, this one was bustling all the time. Crew members were moving and setting up equipment and actors were rehearsing and then filming scenes. Two men quietly observed the events every day, making sure not to get in the way. Occasionally, the producer, Frank Capra, Jr., the director, William Graham, or an actor would confer with them. Whatever they said was gospel. They were Jock Menzies and Robert Meek, technical advisors for "Trapped Beneath the Sea," a two-hour ABC summer Movie, starring Lee J. Cobb and Martin Balsam and airing Friday at 8PM.

Menzies and Meek aren't merely technical advisors in the usual sense of the word. They are, in actuality, the survivors of a real-life tragedy that occurred in June, 1973, when their four-man research submarine became trapped on the ocean floor off Key West, Florida. Thirty-one hours later, the sub was brought to the surface in a courageous, frustrating and ingenious rescue operation, but with two of the four men dead.

Martin Balsam and Lee J. Cobb

Menzies and Meek lived through the ordeal. The story that "Trapped Beneath the Sea" tells was inspired by the actual event. But it is a fictional dramatization. All of the characters are products of imagination and do not represent any persons living or dead. Menzies, a taciturn Scotsman who served with the Royal Navy as a frogman, is now a professional submarine pilot, one of about 30 in the U. S. He doesn't talk much about the tragedy (two weeks after the rescue, he was diving again in the Gulf of Mexico). From newspaper and magazine articles on the actual event, one discovers that neither Menzies nor Meek were very accessible to reporters. They were ready, willing and able to assist in creating a chilling realism for the film, however. Both men, who now live in Santa Barbara and build Tortugas boats when not on a diving mission, did much of the actual diving for the sequences filmed off Catalina Island in Southern California.

Actors Paul Michael Glaser and Cliff Potts portray the pilot and an ichthyologist, respectively, in the film. Their roles parallel Menzies' and Meek's actual positions during the Key West dive. "Cliff and I would ask Jock and Bob what their reactions or actions were during a particular time period of the ordeal in order to give us an idea of how to lend authenticity to our portrayals." points out Glaser. "They told us quite matter-of-factly — no emotion." The advice, suggestions and observations Menzies and Meek made during the production of "Trapped Beneath the Sea" were received with great respect by those concerned — producer Capra, director Graham, and the actors. After all, Menzies and Meek had been there. They knew.

The submarine used in "Trapped Beneath the Sea," a 20-foot long research submersible, actually belongs to the Department of Oceanography of Texas A&M, a college more renowned for turning out military officers and rugged football players than sailors. Producer Frank Capra, Jr. located the craft which is actually based at Galveston, Texas, some 150 miles from the campus, after an extensive search of marine research institutions throughout the country.

"I found three, but the craft owned by Texas A&M was the closest and was available," says Capra, son of the legendary Oscar-winning director. "The Texas sub had only recently returned from working along the banks of the Gulf of Mexico and had been completely refitted." Instead of sailing it, the Texas A&M crew, consisting of Ken Bottoms, Mike Cooke and Dr. Thomas Bright, all of the college's Department of Oceanography, arranged to have the mini-sub trucked overland from Galveston to Hollywood. "We had a set shooting schedule for the film," adds Capra, "and as the sub's top speed is three knots we just couldn't wait until 1975 for it to arrive."

Upon completion of the film, this star of the submarine set was loaded aboard its truck and returned to Galveston where, after rubbing rudders with Hollywood's luxurious yachts and sailing craft off Catalina and Malibu, it will have to be content with a kelp buildup off Corpus Christi or a new school of flounders somewhere in the Gulf.

Elizabeth Montgomery will star in "Dark Victory," a poignant love story to be presented as a three-hour NBC World Premiere Movie during the 1975-76 season on NBC. The film is a modernized version of the 1939 Warner Bros. classic which starred Bette Davis, George Brent and Humphrey Bogart. Miss Montgomery will portray a terminally ill television producer whose love for her fiance, who is her doctor, gives her the determination to go on. The actress starred last year in the critically acclaimed NBC World Premiere drama, "A Case of Rape." She also starred in the successful television dramas "The Legend of Lizzie Borden" and "Mrs. Sundance." The screenplay of "Dark Victory" by M. Charles Cohen is based on the 1934 Broadway play by George Brewer Jr. and Bertram Bloch. In 1967, the film was remade by United Artists as "Stolen Hours."

'ISLAND PARADISE'

Catalina Island always has played a big part in the life of William Conrad, who stars in Cannon on CBS, Wednesdays at 9PM. As a then-slim Southern California youth addicted to pre-World War II big band music, Conrad remembers riding "the Big White Steamer" to Avalon to dance to the rhythms of such musical favorites as Jan Garber, Glen Gray, Sammy Kaye and Tommy Dorsey in the island's still-existent Casino. Like most of his generation, he found Catalina an inviting playground away from the usual mainland haunts, with its many attractions—the glass bottom boats, beaches, sportsfishing and, of course, an intriguing array of new feminine faces.

Except for time lost as a wartime fighter pilot and Armed Forces Radio Service producer-director, the actor, who in September returns for his fifth season as the portly private eye on Cannon, has been a constant visitor to Catalina Island and its marine environs. A noted deep-sea fisherman who set a world record a few years ago when he hooked a 61¼-pound sailfish with a 6-pound test line off Mexico's Yucatan peninsula, Conrad has landed many a Marlin in Catalina waters. As the owner of the 47-foot yacht "Moonraker" for several years, he was a sailing regular seen almost every weekend in Avalon Bay. But, since parting company with that classy ketch, another strong personal interest keeps him commuting regularly from the mainland.

It's his more than fatherly concern for one of the nation's most unique prep schools, Catalina Island School, from which his 18-year-old son Chris was graduated on June 7. As a three-year member of the Board of Trustees, the veteran actor has devoted as much of his time and energies as his entertainment career permits to furthering the development of the school and its accent on outdoor education.

"I love that school," he exclaims. "It's a wonderful educational experience for a lot of young people." Conrad has expressed that enthusiasm in several ways with generous contributions to campus expansion: he backed a documentary film used to promote and publicize the school on a national basis and, before its sale, provided the "Moonraker" for instructional purposes in a class on seamanship. And the school soon will fall heir to the Boston whaler boat he purchased for son Chris' use as an underclassman.

Currently, Catalina Island School, under the directorship of new head master Richard Wheeler, is embarked on an innovative educational concept described as a "school within a school." Under the experiment, as many as 10 other Southern California private schools on the prep level (grades 9 through 12) have participated in a program in which their students monitor Catalina Island classes in a variety of subjects—marine biology, geology of Catalina, flora and fauna of the island, geological hikes and plankton tows (dragging for plankton from a boat)—for five-day periods. According to Wheeler, the experiment is working so successfully he hopes to expand the program next year to include selected public schools through the auspices of the State Department of Education.

Another CIS development of interest to Board of Trustees member Conrad is its newly inaugurated "subsistence fisheries program" in which volunteer students replenish the campus food locker with their catches of rock cod and sand dabs from the well-stocked fishing grounds near the school's Toyon Bay locale. The school's food supply also benefitted recently from the acquisition of a 150-pound Marlin hauled in by fisherman friend of the senior Conrad.

Outdoorsmen like Western author Zane Grey long ago discovered the virtues of Catalina as a virtual sporting paradise, as Conrad is quick to point out. It was Grey who reportedly stocked the island with a herd of American Buffalo whose descendants still browse within the campus confines of Catalina Island School. And, the actor notes, the famed Catalina Island Tuna Club ranks as one of the first sports fishing clubs on the West Coast.

What's it like to be funny in front of an audience night after night? Weekend, NBC News' late-night TV magazine, looks at the question from the comedian's point of view, Saturday, July 26 at 11:30PM. The cameras zero in on Catch a Rising Star, a club in New York City that is a showcase for would-be comedians who work for nothing but the experience and the hope that someone important will see their act. The three stand-up comedians featured in Weekend, both in performance and off-stage, are (top to bottom) Lenny Schultz, Mike Preminger and Larry Cobb.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR SEN. HUGH SCOTT (R–Pa.)

You were one of the sponsors of legislation to permit taxpayers to allocate one dollar for presidential-campaign financing. Why doesn't the law permit the taxpayer to designate which political party is to benefit from his contribution?—Mrs. Helen Gamer, Dubuque, Iowa

● Several years ago, the law did just that–it allowed the taxpayer to select the political party of his or her choice to receive the dollar. However, it was felt that under such a system one party or the other might receive undue benefit. The purpose of the law is to give an equal chance to each party. Also, it was felt that third parties and new parties would be given far less money than perhaps they might otherwise be entitled to. This raised serious Constitutional questions. So the law was revised so that all money would go into a special fund, then the fund would be divided up among the major, minor and new parties according to a specific formula.

FOR BEA ARTHUR, star of "Maude"

Do you enjoy gossip—as I'm sure "Maude" does?— T.R.O., Ann Arbor, Mich.

● And how. I love it. I don't believe a word of what I read, but I read every word in all the columns very carefully and remember everything. As well as reading gossip, I also like to hear it. I think every woman does, don't you?

What's your favorite daydream?—R.H. Smith, Atlanta, Ga.

● Breakfast in America, lunch in Paris, tea in London and dinner in Rome. Back to the U.S. for lobster in Philadelphia, oysters in Boston, frankfurters at New York's Coney Island. Ending up, of course, in the chocolate town of Hershey, Pa. And, wait for the best part of my dream: I don't gain a single ounce from any of it.

FOR TED LINDSAY, hockey sportscaster

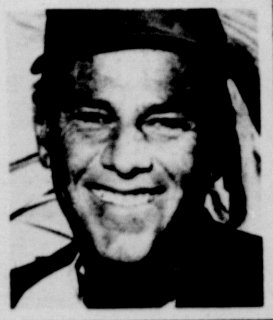
How do you manage to insert commercials in a hockey game? Do you arrange "unnatural" breaks in the action? —John Forbes, Atlantic City, N.J.

● Not exactly. But there is "coordination" between the production crew and the game official who drops the puck for face-offs. This is achieved through a small buzzer worn under the official's arm. As long as it's vibrating, a commercial is on. When it stops, the official knows that coverage has resumed.

FOR KATE SMITH

Of all the meetings you've had with well-known people, which was the most memorable?—M.L., Santa Fe, N.M.

● The audience I had with the Pope. I converted to Catholicism in 1965, and the late Cardinal Spellman arranged for me to have a private session with His Holiness. There never was an audience like that one–truly the most unforgettable of my entire career.



FOR McLEAN STEVENSON

Are you related to the late Ambassador Adlai Stevenson? Also, how did you get started in show business?—Brian Mahoney, Rensselaer, N.Y.

● Yes, as a matter of fact, I am a cousin of Adlai Stevenson of Illinois. I grew up in Bloomington. I got started in show business while at Northwestern University, and later moved to New York, where I worked in the theater.

FOR JACKIE GLEASON

As a veteran dieter, do you have any tips for losing a great deal of weight quickly?—D.M.B., El Paso, Texas

● Yes. PRAYER and S T A R V A T I O N !

FOR SAM SNEAD

It seems that the National Open is often won by lesser-known players who didn't expect to win. How do you explain this?—James Brennan, Buffalo, N.Y.

● The Open has always been comparatively easy for the outsider. He's playing all alone out there. No gallery. No pressure. Nobody bothers him until the third or fourth round, by which time he's in good shape to win it all.

FOR EILEEN FORD of Ford Models, Inc.

How can a young girl who lives in a small town get started in modeling?—Dede Rudat, Las Cruses, N.M.

● I'm sorry to tell you that there is no way to get started in modeling in a small town. Unhappily, 85 to 90 percent of all the photography done in America is done in New York City. The best way to get started is to send pictures to reliable New York agencies and ask their advice. But remember that you must be between 5-7 and 5-9⅛ in your stocking feet, and nothing will alter that requirement.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

I'm always reading that Stiller & Meara have split—yet they seem to be together professionally. What's the story?—A. Strickland, Los Angeles, Calif.

● We checked with both. Anne said: "Split what? Maritally we're a terrific team, and have been since 1954. I wash and Jerry dries. I run up bills and Jerry pays them. We argue on how to raise our two kids. What better proof of 'togetherness' is there? Right now I'm working on my new CBS-TV show ('Kate McShane') and Jerry's doing his Broadway play ('The Ritz'). That's good because when we're together all day and night, I never know when the act's over and the marriage is beginning." But Jerry said: "We don't have enough time for each other. When we work together, it's as performers, not as husband and wife. When Anne is busy, and I have spare time, I resent it. I guess I'm a bit jealous. I'm no different from any other man. I'm sensitive and have an ego."

Introducing the Saratoga idea:

That's the Saratoga idea.

More puffs than 100's. Tailored longer and slimmer than 100's, so you enjoy extra smoking time, extra smoking pleasure, without smoking more cigarettes.

Priced no more than 100's. And Saratoga 120's are rich, full-flavor cigarettes made from a fine blend of tobaccos.

More than just a new brand. Saratoga 120's are a whole new idea in smoking pleasure. Because now you can enjoy smoking longer without smoking more. Look for them in the new 120 mm crush-proof box.

Menthol and Regular.

Standard 100's

My Ten Rules for Getting Along With Grown-Up Children

By Sloan Wilson
Especially for FAMILY WEEKLY

"When my oldest daughter became the producer of a television show, I found myself telling her exactly how to put on good programs, and when she married a man whose field is brain research, I found myself chockful of little nuggets of information for him. The obvious fact that I knew absolutely nothing about the professions of my daughter and son-in-law did not stop me until I saw the pained expressions on their faces."

Elizabeth Gee

One of the sad aspects of modern civilization is the fact that many parents rarely see their sons and daughters after "the kids" have grown up. One reason is that in this vast nation, young people often roam thousands of miles from home in search of a good job or a better education. Another may be "the sheer ingratitude of those darn kids," a phrase that is best forgotten if the parents want their grown children to love or even like them. And a third reason may be that many parents don't know how to change gears when their sons and daughters grow up, and go on treating them as children forever.

Three of my four children are in their middle or late twenties. They have taught me a little about how to deal with grown children, and in my teaching days I learned a little from my students. Here are ten bits of advice that I have gleaned from the young people themselves.

1. It's important to recognize the point at which a child sees himself or herself as an adult. Some youngsters consider themselves adults the minute they graduate from high school, while others hang on to childhood all the way through college, or even longer. It may sound crass, but the rule of thumb in my family is that a child is a child as long as I support him or her financially. Anyone who takes money from me must face the dreadful fact that my advice goes with it. Of course there can be exceptions to this rule. A medical student, for example, can be an adult who still needs financial support from his parents.

2. Once children consider themselves adults, parents have to learn to treat them as adults or risk losing all contact with them. It is easy to say that a mother or father should treat grown children as friends, but I don't think that's entirely true. The relationship between parents and children is much deeper and more touchy than friendship.

Still, I think it fair to say for starters that we shouldn't say anything to our grown children that we would not say to friends. Most people, for instance, would not think of asking even their closest friends how much money they make or how their sex life is going. Occasionally we might offer unasked advice to friends, but few of us would push it. It's also a help if a parent refrains from giving advice on subjects that he or she knows little or nothing about.

I found this rule against volunteering advice only after I had made a complete fool of myself. When my oldest daughter became the producer of a television show, I found myself telling her exactly how to put on good programs, and when she married a man whose field is brain research, I found myself chockful of little nuggets of information for him. The obvious fact that I knew absolutely nothing about the professions of my daughter and son-in-law did not stop me until I saw the pained expressions on their faces.

3. Be long on praise but very short on criticism. I don't think children ever outgrow the need for encouragement from their parents, but they may have suffered so much criticism from both parents and teachers when they were very young that they will be quick to reject it once they are old enough to make their own living. In this respect one cannot treat adult children simply as friends. The words from a parent have much more impact on grown children than on a friend and have to be used much more carefully.

4. If you have a son named William and one called Robert and you have been calling them Billy and Bobby, try Bill and Bob when they grow up. When a son or daughter is with friends his or her own age, listen for what names the friends use. Almost no one wants to go through life with the nicknames or diminutives of early childhood.

5. When your children make what appear to be bad mistakes, recognize the fact that they may know more about what they're doing than you do.

I learned this the hard way. My oldest daughter infuriated me when she dropped out of Trinity College in Ireland, where she was supposed to be spending her junior year. Her reason for doing this was that she loved a young man in Philadelphia so much that she couldn't stand to be away from him another few months. As things worked out, she married him, helped him through graduate school by working days, and got her degree in her spare time. Her husband became a fine young scientist, and now I don't blame her for running home from Ireland in the middle of the school year.

In retrospect, a great deal of the advice I gave my children turned out to be wrong, and I'm glad they didn't take it. Now my favorite answer to many of the questions my children ask is an honest "I don't know." They respect that much more than a fake reply.

6. Don't object to whatever hairstyles and clothing your adult sons and daughters choose.

"Why do you wear your hair so long when you know how I hate it?" I asked.

"Frankly, Dad," he said, "you like my hair short and my girl likes it long. I love you very much, but when it comes to hairstyles, I'd rather please my girl."

7. If your adult children get into serious trouble—cracking up an automobile, getting inconveniently pregnant or becoming involved with drugs—forget the recriminations and try to help them pick up the pieces. Nobody regrets a mistake more than the person who made it. Like anyone else, grown children need a helping hand when they are down, not a slap in the face.

8. Never lend money to your grown children. Give it. If the "child" is ever able to give it back, he or she probably will in one way or another. Meantime they won't avoid you the way most people avoid even relatives to whom they owe money.

9. Even when your children reach middle age, try not to play favorites. It may sound crazy, but sibling rivalry often continues for a lifetime. It is no fun for a young man to come home if he is treated as a pauper and his brother is treated as a prince. Even the prince can be embarrassed if he is treated as an extension of his parents' pride rather than as a person whom they would love regardless of his success or failure.

10. Forget any or all of these rules if they don't work for you and your grown children. Human nature is obviously much too complex to be put into words. Maybe you have grown sons and daughters who take childish nicknames as a sign of affection and who think that their father doesn't care about their careers if he doesn't ask a lot of questions and give advice.

If you know of other "rules" that might cement the relationship between parents and grown children, please pass them on to me. I can use them. I haven't seen my own grown daughters for months and months.

Wife, Comedienne, Actress, Designer–

Suzanne Pleshette On the Loves Of Her Life

"One day Tommy was trying to educate me in the ways of money, and he came across the fact that I was spending $60 a week on laundry!"

Every working day, Suzanne Pleshette plays Bob Newhart's wife on CBS-TV's popular "Bob Newhart Show." In real life she is the charming, articulate wife of Thomas Joseph Gallagher III. She is also a designer and businesswoman.

FAMILY WEEKLY: How would you compare your TV and real husbands?

SUZANNE: I have two great husbands. Bob is like an extension of my own husband, they are so alike in so many ways. And Bob's real wife Ginny and I are very much alike. We're both emotional. Our men are logical—and they carry us along as we go blithely through life.

FW: I understand that Bob Newhart isn't always the easiest person in the world to work with. Do you find this to be true?

SUZANNE: Bob and I have never had a fight.

FW: Why is that?

SUZANNE: Because he's devious. When something isn't right, he doesn't explode or make waves. He waits, then goes behind the scenes to the cause of the trouble—like a script change—and very subtly gets whatever is wrong taken care of. Tommy takes care of things for me, too, but he's my husband, so he does it more openly.

FW: Do you see much of Bob and his wife off the set?

SUZANNE: We're very close. We get together at least twice a week outside of work. Tommy and Bob will sit and drink Scotch together while Ginny and I talk and talk. They just ignore us and go on with their thing. The last time Bob went up to Las Vegas to do his show, we sat in Perino's restaurant the night before and cried and hugged each other goodbye. You'd have thought we were parting forever.

FW: What does your husband do?

SUZANNE: He's an executive for a family estate in Texas. He also handles the business end of our high-fashion bed-linen business distributed by J. P. Stevens Fine Arts.

SUZANNE: I do the original primitive sketches, then work with professional artists to make the copper roll. It's quite complicated and very technical. Fortunately I've found two artists who are technically very astute and interpret my drawings without taking away from me and my original concept.

FW: How did this get started?

SUZANNE: I'm not one for furs and jewels, so my big extravagance has always been beautiful imported sheets. I want my bedroom to be an oasis. Tommy never minded until he saw the laundry bills. I change bed linens twice a week, and all the exquisite European things had to be done by hand. I never thought anything about it. They'd come back all wrapped in tissue and tied with a ribbon. They looked lovely! One day Tommy was trying to educate me in the ways of money, and he came across the fact that I was spending $60 a week on laundry! So I decided to design my own linens because I couldn't find anything I wanted American-made.

FW: How do you manage two careers at the same time?

SUZANNE: I organize my time very carefully. I have four months off from the show, plus two weeks off when we work five weeks in a row. Also, when Bob plays Las Vegas, we have five weeks off. So in January I start on designs that will come out in the fall.

SUZANNE: I have an angel of a housekeeper. She's been with me for years. When we moved into our new place, she said, "Show me once where to put everything, and then I'll know." So I took off two weeks to do just that. I even went through my closet, and came to the conclusion that if I hadn't worn something for 12 years, I should throw it away.

FW: Where did you live before?

SUZANNE: We had a big place on two acres of ground in Beverly Hills, complete with tennis court, pool and guesthouse. But we travel a lot, and you begin to feel guilty if you don't make use of the pool and courts. Also, the house was too big for intimate entertaining. People couldn't talk. Still, it was the first house I'd ever lived in, and I loved it.

FW: Did you buy a smaller home?

SUZANNE: We moved into a high-rise. It's like a maximum-security hotel. Everything is taken care of. It's the kind of a place you don't mind closing the door on and walking away. I don't think it's our final way of living, but for now it's all right. If we have children, or I don't work, we can take another look at our situation and discuss what to do.

FW: You once said you wanted four children. Do you still want that many?

SUZANNE: I said that when I was 18. In today's world, I think it would be unfair and a mistake. Also, Tommy and I are adults. We've been married seven years. We don't have the energy at this point in our lives to take on four children. Two, maybe.

FW: Have you ever thought of adopting children?

SUZANNE: Well, right now we don't really feel the need for children. What I mean is, we don't have to find our identity through children. We are complete and very happy. But that doesn't mean we wouldn't welcome a family.

FW: What would happen to your acting career if you got pregnant?

SUZANNE: Oh, I had that written into my contract! From the very beginning I've told them that if it should come to pass, I wanted Emily to be pregnant on the show. Or if I didn't show, to write around it, or let people think I was just getting chubby.

SUZANNE: There is nothing better than knowing you're going to laugh all day long. However, I do miss drama. It was good exercise. But no one thought of me as a comedienne then. That's why I did the Johnny Carson show. I wanted people to look at me and see that I could be breezy and wasn't always a hooker or a truck driver. Now I guess I'll have to go back and prove I'm not always a comedienne.

SUZANNE: I think we've brought the good qualities of both Bob's and my marriages into the show. We try to keep the show honest and our characters true. For instance, one script had Emily "talking down" her husband in front of others. Now, I wouldn't do that and I know Emily wouldn't either. So they changed the script. I think the show is kind of like olives: You develop a subtle taste for it.

What Every Couple Should Know About Marriage

True or False: In a marriage relationship, small, thoughtless acts are likely to carry stronger messages than affirmations of affection. (See number 2)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How successful your marriage is likely to be depends to a large extent on when you get married.

2. In a marriage relationship, small, thoughtless acts are likely to carry stronger messages than affirmations of affection.

3. A marriage has two strikes against it if the husband and wife come from different social or economic backgrounds.

4. There are five common motives for infidelity.

5. The so-called dominant partner—who looks, talks and otherwise gives the impression of ruling the roost at home—is seldom the real boss.

6. If a wife has romantic daydreams about other men (movie stars, friends or acquaintances), it is a sign that her affection for her husband is waning.

ANSWERS

1. True. A California State University study has found that the divorce rate of women declines with each year they wait to marry, until a gradual leveling off at about age 25. Men who marry between the ages of 27 and 31 have the best chances of achieving marital stability. "When all the evidence is in," says the study, "it appears that women should wait until they are 25 to marry and that they should have their two children at age 28 and age 30. It's pointed out that this gives them ample time to have children before they are 35 and it also gives them three years after marrying to get the relationship on solid ground emotionally and financially."

2. True. Psychologist Sven Wahlroos provides an excellent illustration of this in his monograph on family communication: "Suppose, for example, that a wife has asked her husband over and over again to clean the washbowl after he shaves. He forgets to do so almost every morning. This, in effect, carries the message, 'Your wishes are not important to me,' and the message is infinitely stronger than the words, 'I want to make you happy, darling.' " Though the wife may say no more about it, her growing resentment may cause her to retaliate in kind, placing a further strain on the relationship.

3. False—as shown by studies sponsored by the National Science Foundation, which evaluated the findings of leading researches over a 25-year period. Conclusions of the investigators: No factual support was found for the generalization that dissimilarity of class background is detrimental to success in marriage—despite popular assumption to the contrary. Says the study: "One can only guess how many marriages have been deterred by the ill-founded advice against marrying out of one's social class."

4. True—according to the findings of a university study of the psychological factors motivating infidelity, which showed that the five common motives that marriage partners gave when asked why they were unfaithful were: failure to achieve a satisfying physical relationship; curiosity; feelings of revenge; boredom; and a need for acceptance and recognition from another person.

5. True—as evidenced by studies conducted at the American Institute of Family Relations, which showed that more often than not the partner who gives the impression of dominating the household doesn't actually have much clout when the chips are down. The study showed that in most cases the partner who gives the appearance of being dominated turns out to be the real boss. Often, it was found, the power is wielded so subtly, and with such finesse, that the other partner never quite wakes up to the fact that instead of being the dominant ruler, he is being adroitly ruled.

6. False. Psychological studies at Yale University have shown that "the occurrence of daydreams is quite common, and not generally related to interpersonal disturbances, adjustment problems or lack of fulfillment in the marriage relationship."

Is your cigarette less than More?

If it isn't More, it's less than More. Because More is the first 120mm cigarette. It's More in every way except price.

More has more style. It has more flavor. It has more. Over 50% more puffs than a 100mm cigarette. Yet More doesn't cost more.

And what's more, More comes in both regular and menthol. They're both long, lean and burnished brown. Regular More delivers rich tobacco flavor while More Menthol packs a cooling blast. Puff after puff after puff.

More and More Menthol. They sit neat in your hand like they were made for it and fit your face like they found a home.

ANNE AND MARK
Royal behavior?

The royal family is apparently not amused by the public behavior of son-in-law Mark Phillips. They feel that Mark should adhere to the traditionally rigid rules of etiquette, but Mark finds some of this protocol too difficult to live by. As an accomplished horseman, Mark is constantly sought out by young fans, and because he loves children and is proud of his equestrian skills, he is only too happy to sign autographs. Autograph signing is one of those things a British aristocrat simply does not do! Royal protocol also demands that yawns be stifled and that hands never be put in one's pockets! Princess Anne's position on public propriety is almost as liberal as Mark's. She too will sign autographs. But she is a bit impatient, and when she feels that she has fulfilled enough requests, she is quick to dismiss her fans. In fact, one child reportedly ran to his mother after asking Anne for her signature and repeated an unwholesome four-letter word that, he insisted, Anne had used to say, "No!"

Woody Allen, proclaimed by critics as "the comic of our age," tells why he doesn't find himself very exciting: "I don't do any of those things one associates with masculinity. If a light switch goes out in the house, I don't know where to begin to fix it. I don't drink. I don't smoke. I don't get high. My big things in life are to sit in the movies all day, to go for walks. I don't mind going to the beach for a weekend, but it's not uppermost in my mind. I'm Mr. New York City. I like to hang out with the fight mob at Madison Square Garden. If I was good enough, I could sit and play jazz all day. I think I have the type of public image where if I was caught doing something immoral, it would not hurt me. I think people are shocked that I'm not on hash or grass." From "On Being Funny: Woody Allen and Comedy," by Eric Lax (Charterhouse, $8.95).

First-birthday celebrations are really no different for apes than they are for humans. We are all stuck with the same dilemma: What to wish for? But then, Cody, the orangutan, is human in many respects—he talks, loves parties and pretends candles are after-dinner cigars. But what human would be thinking about bananas when a delectable birthday cake is sitting right in front of him?

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

PEN POINTS

What did I ever do back then
Before we had the ballpoint pen?
I know. I filled my pen with ink
And oft where ink was free. I'd slink
To banks, post offices, and such,
And partly since I took too much
My pen would sometimes spring a leak
And give my shirt a blackened streak.
The fountain pen I used, in truth,
But though I signed my name impressively
I find the ballpoint acts less messively.

A sad-faced man went into a flower shop early one morning. The clerk was ready to take his order for a funeral piece, but he had guessed wrong. The customer wanted a basket of flowers to send to his wife for their anniversary.

"And what day will that be?" the clerk asked.

SNEAKERS

Speaking of sneakers, as often we do,
Streakers wear sneakers
We'll look back with fondness
And know why Mom cried.
But this will not end in my future life:
My children will call me
"Dad's Tennis Shoe Wife."

A five-year-old boy in my preschool class was showing pictures of his parents to some friends. He had just finished showing what seemed to be his father's graduation picture, but he was quick to explain: "But that's not my real father." Then showing a more up-to-date picture, he said: "This is what he turned into."

Two caterpillars were crawling across the grass when a butterfly flew over them. They looked up, and one nudged the other and said: "You couldn't get me up in one of those things for a million dollars!"
